Gemini Fuel Cells Act Up; Shortened Flight Is Likely

THERE GOES DAD — Wife and daughters of astronaut Gordon Cooper strained their eyes at Cape Kennedy this morning to catch the last glimpse of rocket bearing Cooper and Charles Conrad aloft for scheduled eight-day orbital flight. Power Blackout May Mean Pacific Splash

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—The Gemini 5 astronauts rocketed into orbit today for an eight-day mission but almost immediately encountered problems in the power system that threatened to shorten the mission.

Planes were ordered out from Hickam Field in Hawaii to an area where the mission would be ended after six orbits if that is deemed necessary.

Mission Control said no orders had been given to end the flight, but it was apparent that they were being seriously considered.

At 1 p.m., four hours into the mission, the control center reported that the oxygen pressure had fallen further to a reading of 85 pounds in the spacecraft and 100 on the ground.

"We're still operating with the fuel cell, putting out amperage as it should," a spokesman said. "The spacecraft is powered down as much as possible and we're presently pulling only about 13 amps."

Backup astronaut Elliott See, who has closely watched the development of the fuel cells, was reported to have studied the situation and was quoted as saying he was still optimistic that the situation would right itself.

"But it's certainly a cause of major concern at this time," the control center said.

If the astronauts land after six orbits, it would come at 6:07 p.m. (EST). Recovery would be in the northern Pacific some 490 miles north of Hawaii. An oil tanker is stationed in that area.

The problem involved a pressure system which converts liquid oxygen to gaseous form to feed into two fuel cells which provide electrical power for the spacecraft.

Early in the flight, L. Gordon Cooper Jr. and Charles Conrad Jr. noted that the pressure in the oxygen tank was dropping gradually. It had risen to a peak pressure of about 800 pounds per square inch, then dropped back to about 180 pounds.

It seemed to stabilize. Then the pressure dropped again.

However, left unresolved by the Mission Control Center announcements was the fact that to function properly the oxygen should be under a pressure of 900 pounds.

To conserve power, Cooper and Conrad shut off the power on almost all systems within the spacecraft that were not critical. These included radar sets, computer, and some of the en-

Kentfield Girl Tells Threats In Mississippi

The life of a Kentfield girl doing civil rights work in Carrollton, Mississippi, has been threatened five times this week during violence which began when the local headquarters of the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party was burned, apparently by arsonists.

Martha Olson, 19, of 811 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, told the Independent-Journal today from a Negro family home in Carrolton, Miss., that she received three phone calls threatening her life and was told face to face that the owner of a local grocery store would kill her if she entered his premises.

She said the threats came after her "usually peaceful area" broke under tensions resulting from a popular referendum held in the state on Tuesday. An amendment to the state constitution making a literacy test unnecessary for voter registration was passed to prevent the intrusion of federal registrars.

Miss Olson said a soft drink machine in party headquarters contained $50 before the fire started at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. "The money must have been

Battle's Toll: 622 Reds, 50 Marines

SAIGON (UPI)—U. S. Air Force and Marine planes, taking up where the ground forces left off, sighted an estimated 400 Communists fleeing from Chu Lai late yesterday and killed at least 55 of them, it was announced today.

The air strikes increased known Communist losses in this week's battle south of Chu Lai to 622 dead. A military spokesman said the figure is expected to "go much higher" as Marines explore the ruins of caved-in tunnels and foxholes on the battlefield.

Lt. Gen. Victor M. Krulak, U.S. Marine commander in the Pacific, told a news conference today that Marine casualties in the battle were one per cent killed and three per cent wounded.

Since a Marine regiment of 5,000 to 6,000 men was involved, the casualties figure out to about 50 dead and 150 wounded.

American warplanes ranged over North Viet Nam today, resuming operations which had been limited for a day or two by stormy weather.

Ten Navy Skyhawks from the USS Coral Sea inflicted heavy damage on the Thanh Hoa army barracks 85 miles south of Hanoi.

Inside South Viet Nam, American Navy, Air Force and Vietnamese government planes flew more than 347 sorties against Viet Cong concentrations and supply areas. Pilots reported 55 Communist guerrillas killed and almost 300 buildings destroyed or damaged.

Tire Repairs Fuss Ends Up In County Jail

An argument over the price of a Sausalito tire repair job early today led to nothing but trouble for two southern Marin men.

By sunrise, one was hospitalized with a scalp wound, the other had allegedly broken parole, and both were in jail, charged with attempted burglary.

On top of that, they lost the argument.

Sausalito police identified them as Charles Gary Daniels, 21, of 640 Northern Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, and Robert James Davis, 20, of 49 Hill Street, Mill Valley.

Police said they were called to the Shell service station at 900 Bridgeway, Sausalito, shortly after midnight by owner Lee Messer because of a dispute over a repaired tire. There they found Davis and Daniels refusing to pay Messer's price, and Messer refusing to give them the tire.

Officers told the two men to return after the service station reopened today to settle the matter.

An hour later, two San Francisco men, Kenneth J. Shaw and David G. George, saw a man break a window in the station while a companion waited in a nearby car.

Shaw grabbed the window breaker and asked him what he was up to. A scuffle ensued between all four men.

After the fight, Shaw and

School Chief Interviews On In Sausalito

The Sausalito School District board met today to interview four applicants for the position of superintendent of the district.

The four candidates are:

George Renworth, 38, director of adult education for the Marin County Superintendent of Schools and director of Bayside for inmates at San Quentin;

John Waugh, 57, director of personnel for the San Ramon Unified School District in Danville, Contra Costa County;

Charles Lavaroni, 38, assistant superintendent for elementary education in the Novato Unified School District, and Blaine Wishert, 45, superintendent of schools in El Dorado County.

The board was not expected to act on the applications until its regular meeting Monday night.

NO WORLD SERIES FOR NOVATO YOUNGSTERS

Although the Novato All-Stars will not be able to play in the Little League World Series next week, they may return from Portland, Ore., tomorrow as champions of the state of California.

The Novato youngsters lost to South Mountain, Ariz., yesterday in the semi-finals of the west coast regionals at Portland, 3-0 in 10 innings.

Novato today went against West Covina, with the winner to be declared state champion. In the championship game today, South Mountain was to play Klamath Falls, Ore., with the winner of that game moving on to the Little League World Series next week in Williamsport, Pa.

Two Jumpers On Bridge; One Stopped, One Dies

A 42-year-old San Francisco woman yesterday became the 287th person to jump to death from the Golden Gate Bridge.

Three and a half hours later, two bridge workers stopped a 37-year-old San Francisco man from jumping.

Juanita R. Daneri, released from Napa State Hospital in June, took a taxi-cab to the bridge's toll plaza at 3:30 p.m., walked to mid-span and vaulted over the rail to her death, according to the California Highway Patrol.

W. L. Rogers of San Francisco, the cab driver, warned a CHP officer at the toll plaza that his fare had said "I think I'm going to jump today."

Rogers said he thought she was joking until she asked to be let off at the toll plaza. Patrolmen said a note in her purse, which she left at the railing, said, "Make no excuses. Your enemies won't believe them. Your friends won't need them."

Her jump was witnessed by James Sweht Jr. of San Francisco, who looked up and saw "a skirt fly over the railing." Miss Daneri's body was recovered minutes later by the Coast Guard.

At 7:30 p.m., two bridge tow truck drivers, Thomas Donoghue and Thomas Grundy, saw Yung Lin Fu, 37, of San Francisco standing on the outside of the bridge railing at mid-span.

The two men ran to the railing. Donoghue grabbed Fu and, with the help of Grundy, pulled him back onto the deck of the bridge.

Fu was taken to San Francisco General Hospital for observation.

Suspect Arson In Car Blaze

Marin Sheriff's deputies today were investigating the possibility of arson in a car fire in front of 178 Cobblestone Drive, Marinwood at 5:50 a.m. today.

The interior of the late model Ford Mustang, belonging to Ralph Rocco of Menlo Park, was extensively damaged.

Suspicion of arson was aroused when three other cars nearby were found to have been vandalized.

Schools Get Most From Marin Taxes

Marin County's schools last year got 59 cents out of every dollar paid by taxpayers, the State Board of Equalization revealed yesterday.

The figure is eight cents higher than the statewide average of 51 cents.

The rest of Marin's tax dollar was split between 26 cents for the county government, eight cents for cities and 7 cents for special districts.

The fiscal 1965 averages were computed by the board and the state controller's office in the process of setting rates for 1965 assessments on railroad cars.

Average tax rate in Marin was $9.37 per $100 assessed valuation in fiscal 1965, compared with the prior year's figure of $9.06. State average last year was $8.31.

Marin's school districts levied $20.8 million, while the county levied $9.3, its cities levied $2.9 million and special districts levied $2.2 million during fiscal 1965.

Reporting In Watts Means 'A Knot In His Stomach'

"I was frightened a few times, but all the time I carried around a knot of sickness in my stomach."

Thus did former Independent-Journal reporter Phil Fradkin describe his feelings in covering the recent Los Angeles riots for the Los Angeles Times.

"What I saw in those six days and nights was complete anarchy," he wrote in a letter to former co-workers at the I-J.

"The overturning of normal life, as lived in a lawful way and according to the mores of our society, is a deeply frightening experience.

Fradkin was one of the first newsmen on the scene when the riot was sparked Aug. 11 and was also one of the first to be injured. He was hit on the right

Death Row Man Wins New Trial

A convicted Los Angeles murderer has been granted a new penalty trial, 14 days before his scheduled execution date at San Quentin Prison.

The State Supreme Court by 4-3 vote yesterday granted the trial to Nathaniel Gaines, 27, who came to Death Row after killing a Los Angeles grocer in 1960.

The majority justices based their opinion on an error by the trial judge in allowing the prosecutor to tell jurors that Gaines, if sentenced to life imprisonment, might be released after seven years. That argument was prohibited by the court in its well-publicized Morse decision of last year.

The justices, however, turned down a plea by Gaines, a truck-driver, for a complete new trial to determine his guilt or innocence.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Bridges Files Suit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Longshore leader Harry Bridges has filed a $250,000 libel suit here against a group of 15 writers, professors and civil rights leaders he says falsely accused him of union injustice, in letters written over an ouster of 45 union members by Bridges. The President of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, alleged that the group falsely described him as an autocratic labor leader and an advocate of union racial discrimination.

Klan Lawyer Killed

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Mat H. Murphy Jr., 51, attorney and third generation Ku Klux Klansman who defended a fellow Klansman charged with murdering a white civil rights worker, died yesterday in a traffic accident near Tuscaloosa. Murphy got wide publicity last spring when he used a strong white supremacy theme in his appeal to a jury to acquit Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., of killing Viola Liuzzo of Detroit, Mich.

King To Be Guarded

MONTREAT, N.C. (AP) — Sheriff's officers mounted a strict security guard today at this Presbyterian conference center where Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. is scheduled to address a meeting on civil rights. Sherfff Harry Clay said last night "anti-King" literature was distributed Thursday by "a lot of people who were unknown—a rough looking group."

School Sabotaged

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A Cuban exile broadcast reported that anti-Castroites burned a central Cuba school where children were being indoctrinated into communism. The fire, in Yajuajay, Las Villas Province, burned an entire block except for a soft drink plant, said the broadcast, beamed to Cuba.

Mexico Epidemic

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An outbreak of intestinal disease has killed four children and an adult, according to reports from a flood-stricken area of West Mexico. Hospitals in the state of Nayarit were reported treating more than 200 persons, mostly children, stricken with the disease.

No Fair Troubles

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa State Fair, protected by about 500 National Guardsmen and 350 peace officers because of rumored threats of disorders, went off peacefully yesterday with more than 50,000 persons having a good time on opening day.

Pipeline Blast Kills

VAN WERT, Ohio (AP) — A natural gas pipeline exploded as a freight train rumbled by today, killing one girl and injuring at least eight others in a nearby farmhouse. At least 100 acres of trees and farm crops were devastated, witnesses said.

Viet Terror Bomb

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP)—A terrorist threw a grenade at two Americans and a Vietnamese, but all three escaped injury, a U.S. military spokesman said today.

Clerics Shot Down In Dixie

HAYNEVILLE, Ala. (UPI) — Two white men — a priest and a seminary student, both civil rights workers —were gunned down on the sidewalk here yesterday. One was killed, and a "special" deputy sheriff has been charged with his murder.

Morrisoe

The slain man was Jonathan M. Daniels, 26, an Episcopal seminary student from Keene, N.H., who was cut down by a load of buckshot in front of a backwoods grocery store.

The Rev. Richard Morrisroe, also 26, a Roman Catholic priest from Chicago, was critically wounded. He was rushed to a Montgomery hospital.

Four Negroes, three of them girls, escaped the gunfire. They, along with the two clergymen had just been released from jail, where they spent a week on charges stemming from civil rights picketing in Fort Deposit, a small town south of this Lowndes county seat.

Daniels

After five hours of deliberation, County Solicitor Carlton L. Perdue announced that Tom Coleman, 52, a highway department engineer who served Sheriff Charles F. Ryals as a "special deputy," had been charged with first degree murder.

More Bloody Riots Hit Athens

ATHENS (AP)—Nightlong rioting which Greece's new premier called "revolutionary action" was quelled at dawn today with fires still burning in some parts of Athens.

The capital looked like an armed camp under guard of police and armored cars.

The battle between massive police forces and rioters, whom police today described as "leftists and diehard communists," raged for six hours and left some sections of the city in shambles.

Police said that 340 persons were taken into custody. Many were released after questioning.

The rioters, most of them supporters of fallen Premier George Papandreou, shouted insults against King Constantine, his mother, and Constantine's new premier, Elias Tsirimokos.

Papandreou left the capital early today for central Greece on his promised "march to the people" to tell his side of his dispute with the 25-year-old king.

T. Lamar Caudle Pardoned

WASHINGTON (AP) — T. Lamar Caudle, an official in the Harry S. Truman administration who served six months in a tax conspiracy case, has been pardoned by President Johnson.

Caudle

Caudle served his time in a federal correctional institution in 1960. The pardon, among other things, wipes out a $2,500 fine he had not paid and means he can practice law again before federal courts.

The pardon was announced yesterday by the Justice Department. The White House had no immediate comment.

Truman dismissed Caudle for outside activities incompatible with his government duties.

Five years later, in 1956, during the Eisenhower administration, Caudle and Matthew J. Connelly, Truman's appointments secretary, were convicted on charges of accepting oil royalties in exchange for using their influence to block prosecution or ease the sentence of a St. Louis shoe wholesaler convicted of federal income tax evasion.

Job Corps Teachers Flee

MORGANFIELD, Ky. (UPI)—State police ringed the federal Job Corps center at Camp Breckinridge today while center officials searched for the cause and cure of discontent which ignited three hours of rioting of hundreds of white and Negro youths.

They waited to see if the center's frightened teaching staff and about 100 students, who left after the rioting, would return.

"The camp's teaching organization is effectively gone," said Charles Singer, a member of the center's security guard.

At least 10 persons were injured in the rioting which erupted yesterday at the camp, one-time site of a U.S. Army infantry training center, reportedly as the result of a "protection" racket among the boys, and food complaints.

Korean Police Use Tear Gas In Riots

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—Police used tear gas and clubs today to break up a demonstration by 1,500 students against the treaty normalizing relations between South Korea and Japan.

It was the second such protest in two days as schools reopened after a brief vacation.

U.N. Budget Up?

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Despite a dearth of dollars in the U.N. Treasury, Secretary-General U Thant has recommended a 7.7 per cent increase in the net U.N. expenditures in 1966, to nearly $120 million.

Italian Blood Feud Again Due To Erupt

REGGIO CALABRIA, Italy (AP)—Sunday is the 22nd of the month, and for the Stillitano family it seems the threat of death.

Since 1960 five members of the family have been slain, each on the 22nd day of August.

The deaths in the little Italian village of Drosi began after a blood vengeance oath was sworn by the uncle of a youth crippled in a duel with a member of the family—Antonio Stillitano.

The crippled youth, Martino Seva, has come home to plead for clemency for the Stillitano family. But somewhere in the Aspromonte bitter mountain country roams his uncle, who reportedly has sworn to kill every member of the family.

Police say the uncle, Demonico Maisano, 45, strikes only on the 22nd of the month—the day young Martino was shot. Police have offered $5,000 reward for Maisano.

Modest Navy Hero Lauded

RICHMOND (AP) — Rather than a parade and the usual honors, a Navy hero of Viet Nam action chose to receive the Navy and Marine Corps Medal at home.

The modest veteran, Earl C. Cronk, 28, was awarded the medal Friday for rescuing four shipmates from a fire and smoke filled compartment aboard the attack carrier U.S.S. Ranger.

On hand for the presentation by Cmdr. Martin Kuhn Jr., commanding officer of the training center at Alameda, were Cronk's wife, Marion, and two sons, Bryce and John.

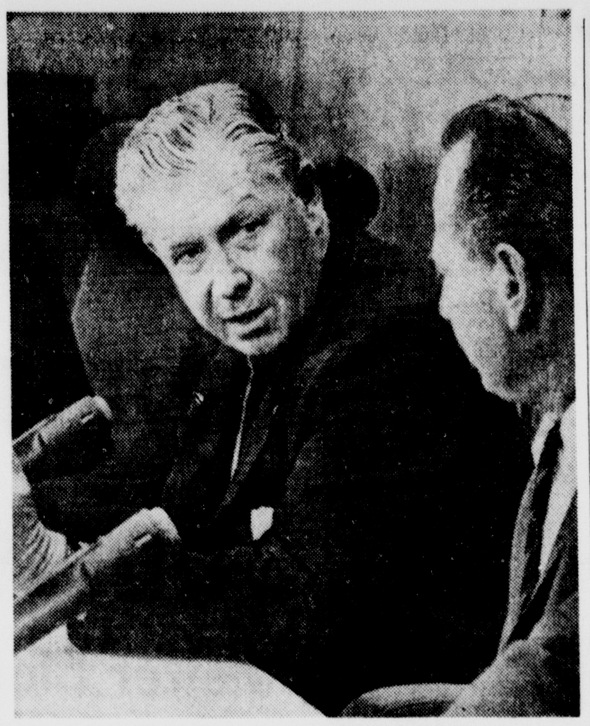

The ex-sailor's modesty was consistent.

Drowsing Motorist Slightly Injured

James T. Mansen, 24, of 270 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, San Anselmo, was treated for cuts on his chin and forehead at Marin General Hospital yesterday morning after he drove his sports car into a tree on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Kentfield, just east of Toussin Avenue.

Mansen told California Highway Patrol officers he had just finished working 21 hours and fell asleep at the wheel.

Six-Car Crash Injures Four

Four drivers were slightly injured last night in a six-car rear-end crash in Highway 101's north-bound lanes at the Alto overpass.

Complaining of pains but refusing immediate medical attention were Leroy E. Hoole Jr., 30, of 323 Dubois Street, San Rafael, Lawrence Muzza, 45, of 215 First Street, San Rafael, Leonard W. Lovell, 44, of Belmont and Walter Miller, 53, of San Francisco.

Other drivers were Warren H. Graham, 43, of 520 Canal Street, Apt. 2, San Rafael, and Alice M. Cadoux, 60, of 40 Scenic Avenue, San Rafael.

Adlai Stevenson's Birthplace Marked

LOS ANGELES, (AP) — The birthplace of Adlai Stevenson, the late U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, will be designated an historic site by the city's Cultural Heritage Board.

Stevenson was born in a house that still stands near the University of Southern California campus and lived there until he was six years old.

Mountain Fair, Mill Valley Art Festival Get Together

The Muir Woods Park Improvement Assn. last night consolidated plans for its Mountain Fair Oct. 9 and 10, including a folk dance exhibition on the second day.

Fair chairman John Iaconetti said he has arranged for cooperation with the Mill Valley Art Fair, slated for the same weekend.

County traffic engineer James Robertson reported on a study of the Muir Woods junction of Panoramic Highway and Sequoia Valley Road. He said he would recommend to the Department of Public Works that signs, striping and illumination be improved.

Expressing dissatisfaction with procedures by which the county planning commission approved a lot-split on Edgewood Avenue recently, directors requested the board of supervisors to amend their ordinance governing such actions so neighbors can express opinions.

The group will meet next at 8 p.m. Sept. 24 in the clubhouse on Ridge Avenue.

Auto Firm Signs Union Contract

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Striking mechanics at one of San Francisco's larger auto dealers signed an interim agreement to resume work today.

When a new contract with the dealers' association is signed, the terms will be applied retroactively to mechanics at Sunset Dodge, the firm said.

Union mechanics have struck at 33 major car dealers' lots and 127 large garages. Salesmen have been refusing to cross picket lines.

Everest Climb Group Reunited

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—The Mt. Everest "Class of '63" is gathering here today for a reunion and a possible ascent of Mt. Rainier.

"We may climb or we may just look at the mountain and reminisce," said Jim Whittaker, first American to set foot atop Mt. Everest.

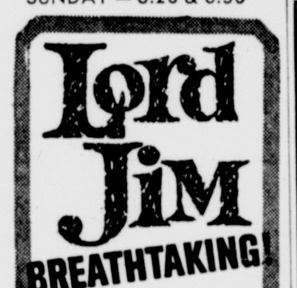

The Everest expedition trained on Mt. Rainier.

WATTS LOOT PILES UP

Los Angeles police Officer Joseph Aube checks a gun recovered from last week's Watts riot looting. Mountains of goods were returned when police drove moving vans into the riot-torn neighborhood yesterday, and broadcast loudspeaker messages that unless stolen goods were piled at curbside in an hour, homes would be searched. Judge Takes Ailing Baby's Custody

A five-month-old illegitimate baby, suffering from a heart defect, finally found a home in Marin yesterday after being shuffled from one Bay Area welfare agency to another.

The infant, rejected by his unwed mother even before his birth, had been shifted the past few months between Oakland, where he was born, and San Francisco, where juvenile and welfare authorities clashed over who should handle the case.

Yesterday, in Marin County Juvenile Court, Superior Court Judge Samuel W. Gardiner grew tired of the dispute and ordered the baby kept in a Marin County receiving home until Sept. 10, when he probably will be declared a ward of the court.

The San Francisco Welfare Department had agreed to place the child up for adoption, but took him to Children's Hospital after learning of the heart defect, then refused to take jurisdiction.

Hospital officials reportedly got no sympathy when they asked San Francisco juvenile authorities to do something. The case came to the attention of the Marin court only after the hospital threatened to turn the tiny child over to San Francisco police, according to United Press International.

Marin Ahead On Property Tax Tallies

Marin County this year assessed property at 22.4 per cent of its full cash value, the State Board of Equalization announced today.

The percentage was higher than the statewide average of 21.8 per cent for fiscal 1966, according to board member Paul R. Leake.

The percentage is used by the state Department of Education to compute state aid to each county's school districts.

If a county's percentage varies too much from the state average, the state board may raise or lower it.

'Fiendish Black Boxes' Can Call Back If You Hang Up

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A state legislator is worried about a "devilish machine" that could keep the housewife hopping to the telephone all day only to hear a pre-recorded advertisement.

Assemblyman Joseph M. Kennick, D-Long Beach, said yesterday that such machines were in existence in California. He branded them "fiendish black boxes."

"This devilish machine is also capable of replacing a call if the party hangs up before the solicitor's message is completed," Kennick said.

Even if the line is busy, he added, the machine will just keep trying.

The lawmaker said Interim Committee on Public Utilities and Corporations already has started an investigation into the use of devices.

"If the use of this kind of equipment is allowed to go uncontrolled," he said, "I can imagine the day when a person will have to listen to dozens of honey-toned solicitations before he can call out of his own home."

Suspect In Hit-Run Case Turns Self In

David Allan Barnholth, 20, of San Francisco, walked into the California Highway Patrol office in Corte Madera last night and identified himself as the driver who walked away from an accident on Highway 1 early yesterday, leaving behind two seriously injured men.

Barnholth, a cook employed in Mill Valley, was booked in county jail on a charge of felony hit and run driving. Bail was set at $1,100.

He told patrolmen he blanked out after the head-on collision on the Shoreline Highway at Tennessee Valley Road.

Driver and passenger of the other car, James Mallick, 28, of 681 Hilary Drive, Tiburon, and Frank Kirkland, 32, of 529 Browning Street, Mill Valley, were both in fair condition in Marin General Hospital today.

Mallick suffered multiple cuts and bruises, while Kirkland suffered a chest injury, multiple bruises and facial cuts. They told the highway patrol they were traveling west in Mallick's Volkswagen when an eastbound Ford sedan swerved into their path.

Barnholth received a cut over his right eye in the crash.

Returning to the riot zone after hospital treatment, Fradkin wrote he spent the next six days roaming the area in a car radioing back descriptions to the city desk.

"Most of the time I spent in police cars as no one, especially with a white face, was safe inside that area," he adds. He was occasionally shot at, he added, by snipers—and by a few "trigger happy National Guardsmen."

"I shouted 'Press, Press' more times than I can remember when approaching a National Guard blockade in one of the photographer's cars," writes Fradkin.

He worked for the I-J from June, 1962 until last September, and in 1963 authored a series called "The Negro in Marin."

vironmental control systems.

Shortly before the apparent stabilization, Cooper said:

"We've decided we're going to have to either re-enter early or else power down."

Mission Control at Houston agreed with him and ordered him to shut down as many power-using systems as possible.

Then Cooper asked if it might be possible that they could power up some systems to try the rendezvous with a satellite they had ejected.

"We're working on a new flight plan for you," the center said.

If the flight is terminated early, it would be the first time in 10 U.S. space flights that one has not gone to completion.

If the spacecraft is ordered to return to earth, experts said, the answer to the problem may never be known. The tanks of oxygen and hydrogen are in the adapter section of the spacecraft which is jettisoned before re-entry.

Weather was reported satisfactory for a landing in the Hawaii area. Winds were light and waves running one to four feet.

George flagged down a police car.

Shortly after 2 a.m., police picked up Davis and Daniels at Marin General Hospital, where Daniels was treated for scalp injuries. Nurses said Daniels told them he had fallen from a moving car.

Daniels was released on $1,650 bail today. Davis was required to remain in custody to await action by his California Youth Authority parole officer.

Appearances in Marin Municipal Court were set for Davis at 1:30 p.m. Monday and for Daniels at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday.

stolen before the fire because the side of the machine where the coin box was held was scarred by smoke.

"We told the sheriff but he doesn't seem to care," said Martha. They took three of our workers to a town 90 miles away for lie-detector tests. It's like we burned down their building instead of their having burned down our building!

"Since the fire the town has really been hot. All the whites are milling around it in groups. When one of our workers left the courthouse where he was being questioned about the fire he was slapped around," Miss Olson said.

Shots were fired towards a church where Martha was attending a meeting of the United Youth for Freedom the night of the fire.

"Seven shots rang out and we could see the flames from the gun through the church window each time. I think the man was firing above the church to scare us," she said.

"The man who shot at us got into his truck, drove up the road and stopped at the house of Jim Johnson, a local Negro who's been active in the movement. The man walked up with his gun and told Jim he had been driving me around and that he was going to kill us both.

"Jim begged him not to shoot. He recognized the man as a farm owner he had worked for. And I've never had a ride from Jim," said Martha.

"We need money desperately to keep going now, but we're not discouraged," Martha said.

Her mother, Mrs. Jeanne Olson, a clerk in the Juvenile Division of the County Probation Department, said a party will be held Sept. 11 at Brown's Hall in Mill Valley, to raise money for the work of Martha and other Marin youths in Mississippi.

Machine Quilt The Material Before Cutting Out Pattern

By EUNICE FARMER

I recently bought some lovely imported cotton and have decided to make a quilted robe from it. I'd like to quilt it with dacron and would like to know if the quilting should be done before or after cutting the pattern?

Mrs. J.I.

Dear Mrs. J.I.:

I would definitely do the quilting before cutting the garment. After the quilting has been completed, you will find the fabric has become smaller, this would affect the size of your garment.

If you are machine quilting, I might also suggest you regulate the pressure on the presser foot so that it won't pull the fabric out of shape as you stitch. Use a medium length stitch and begin at the center of the fabric and work out to the outer edges instead of beginning at the selvage. This will prevent a bias pull on your fabric. If you intend to launder the robe, be sure to use only washable fabrics and filler.

Here's a timely hint for mothers who are getting their children's school clothes ready. Most young boys grow in height before width, consequently we all have many sports shirts that have become too short to tuck into their trousers but fit elsewhere.

Convert them to the new and popular Jac shirts. Make a wide hem and add buttons and a buttonhole on the sides, forming a fold similar to the one on the ready-made jac shirts. This little tip will add another season's wear and give you a few extra dollars.

Mrs. Mary K. Williamson, Granbury, Tex. is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for this suggestion.

Several of you have asked for information or suggestions for sewing on "deerskin." Since I have never lived out west I am not familiar with this type of leather. If anyone has any suggestions for working with deerskin, will you please write me immediately and I will also add sewing tips for suedes and leather. From the fall collections I have seen in preview showings, leather is going to be more popular than ever, so you'll want this information as soon as possible. Please send any of your hints on leather to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal and we'll see that you get all the "right" answers.

KNIT NOTES: Mrs. A. S. says: When casting on stitches to knit, try leaving an extra length of yarn. Then, when you are ready to sew up the seams, you do not have to "tie" on—just thread your large needle and start sewing up the seam.

Can you tell me what your opinion is about electric scissors? I have seen them on the notion counters and also at my trading stamp store and don't want to buy them without your approval.

Mrs. B. A.

Dear Mrs. B.A.:

I'm afraid I'll have to let our readers enter into this. I usually try to test all the new sewing notions that are available. However, I have become so accustomed to my large tailor shears, that I haven't tried the electric ones. If you have used them, perhaps you can give us your opinions and we'll send them to Mrs. B.A.—and also pass them on to you. If they work great, they would be a wonderful gift item to the gal in your family who sews!

Occasionally I do stir up a great deal of "dust" when I ask your opinions. A recent topic was your opinion of "shifts." Very few of you seem to be "middle of the road" on this. You either think they are great, or as the majority wrote me, you think they are atrocious. If you are thin, especially in the hips, they appeal to you. The women who have added a few inches to the waist and hips, prefer the shifts with a little fitting. This is done by adding your own darts to the pattern.

Fortunately, we are all individuals and can wear what we choose. Summing it all up, I would suggest you carefully analyze your own figure and wear the kind of clothes that do the most for you. Many women look ridiculous because they insist on wearing the most extreme styles just because they are new — without any consideration as to how they will look on them. Let's consider our figure and our age, then select a becoming style and color and you should come up with a real winner.

YOUR SEWING GLOSSARY: Coup de velours; A cut velvet usually on silk or satin.

Elaine Freitas Will Be Bride In October

The engagement of Elaine Frances Freitas and Peter Di Giulio of Sonoma has been announced by her mother, Mrs. Robert Adrian O'Mara of San Rafael.

Elaine, who is the daughter of the late Edward William Freitas, is the sister of Mrs. David Schwab, Mrs. William C. Haley, and Jane and John B. O'Mara. She is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Manuel T. Freitas and the late Mr. and Mrs. James A. Tassi.

Elaine was graduated from Dominican Convent, attended the University of California for two years and was graduated from St. Mary's College at Notre Dame, Indiana, with a major in English and journalism. At U.C. she was affiliated with Alpha Phi sorority. The bride-elect is a private secretary with Crown - Zellerbach Corp.

Peter is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gisberto Di Giulio of Sonoma. He was graduated from Sonoma Valley High School and has a machine shop business in Sonoma. He is the brother of Emil and George Di Giulio and Mrs. Rena Bottarini and Mrs. Susie Jones. His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Emil Di Giulio and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Ramaciotti of Sonoma.

An Oct. 16 wedding is planned at St. Raphael's Church in San Rafael.

Grace Carboni Weds Ronald J. Ruggiero

St. Emydius Church in San Francisco was the setting on Aug. 14 for the wedding of Grace Frances Carboni and Ronald Joseph Ruggiero of Kentfield.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Benjamin Carboni of San Francisco.

The ceremony was performed at noon.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length gown of white silk organza accented with Alencon lace, seed pearls, and crystals. The skirt extended into a watteau style chapel length train.

Preceding the bride to the altar in gladiola chiffon gowns were Margo Braghetta as maid of honor, and bridesmaids, Regina Ruggiero, Stella Du Bose, Michele Keeffe, and Marcia Wicklow.

Joseph Kraut served the bridegroom as best man and ushering were Victor Carboni, Robert Ruggiero, Richard Perotti and Paul Gross.

A reception followed the ceremony in the Continental Ballroom of the Hilton Hotel.

The bride was graduated from Lincoln High School, City College of San Francisco, and St. Luke's School of Nursing.

The bridegroom was graduated from St. Ignatius High School and the University of San Francisco. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Ruggiero of Kentfield.

Following a wedding trip to Lake Tahoe, the couple will reside in San Francisco.

Therese Helene Worth Wed In San Francisco Ceremony

Cantor Joseph L. Portnoy officiated at the Sunday afternoon wedding of Therese Helene Ashlea Worth of San Francisco, formerly of Larkspur, and Stephen Adler Simon of San Francisco in the chapel at Temple Emanuel in San Francisco.

Terrie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford L. Worth of Stamford, Conn., formerly of Larkspur, wore a full length gown of white peau de soie with empire bodice and A-line skirt for the 2 p.m. ceremony in which she was given in marriage by her father.

MRS. STEPHEN SIMON

Her sister, Penelope Ann Worth of Stamford, wore a full length empire sheath of petal pink crepe as maid of honor. Attending as bridesmaids were Susan Simon, sister of the bridegroom and Robert Tennana, both of San Francisco.

Robert Simon of San Francisco served as best man for his brother and ushering were Jeffrey Lloyd and Thomas Hurwitz, both of San Francisco.

The bride attended Redwood High School and University of California where she was a member of Phi Mu sorority.

Stephen, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Mervyn S. Simon of San Francisco, attended University of Arizona. He is attending classes at Los Angeles College of Optometry where he is a member of Omega Delta, professional fraternity.

Following a reception in the French Parlor of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, the couple left on a Hawaiian wedding trip. They will make their home in Los Angeles on their return.

Tea Dance Will Honor Deb

By MOLLY MARIN

Dr. and Mrs. William L. Wissman are entertaining at a tea dance for their debutante daughter, Mary, from 2 to 6 o'clock Wednesday at their home on Golden Gate Avenue in Belvedere.

Mary has chosen a pink chiffon frock for the party and will be joined in the receiving line by her parents, her brother, Bill, and her escort, Guy Joy.

THE TEA dance, to which 85 guests have been invited, will include all of the Marin debutantes and their escorts, other young friends of the deb and some of her parent's contemporaries.

Included in the guest list are Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Audy of San Francisco, Dr. and Mrs. Donovan Cooke of Tiburon, Dr. and Mrs. B. W. Richardson of Larkspur, Bert Talbot, and the Messrs and Mesdames R. H. Fink, Jack Wellisch, William Brantman, C. J. Lennihan, Carlton Skinner, and Kirk Bassett.

INCOMING FRESHMEN and undergraduates who will be honored by the Brown University and Pembroke College alumni clubs of Northern California at a "splash party" on Aug. 29 at the home of the Dana Leavitts in Moraga, include several Marinites. The party will start with swimming followed later by a barbecue supper.

Marin young people to be honored are Sara McCoy and Katherine Dunkerton of Kentfield, Stephen R. Page of Ross, Donald E. Carroll of Larkspur, Robert D. Ramsey and Brian L. Carr of San Rafael and Charles A. Wright of Inverness. Among adults attending from Marin will be Mrs. Bruce Flanagan of San Rafael, president of the Pembroke Alumnae Club of Northern California, and Brown University alumni Vernon Libby of Fairfax and John Cutler of Mill Valley and their wives.

MR. AND MRS. Alan Kaplan and their daughters, Gina and Nicol of Hamilton Air Force Base have had as their visitors Mrs. Kaplan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Swann of Harlingen, Tex., and Mr. Kaplan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Kaplan of New York City. The families had a 10 day vacation together at Las Vegas and during that time they celebrated Gina's seventh birthday at the Tropicana and also the Swanns' 37th wedding anniversary at the Dunes. The Swanns returned to Hamilton for a two weeks stay and left for their home in Texas on Tuesday.

FLYING EAST to attend the wedding of their granddaughter, Elizabeth Morgan Wiley, are Mr. and Mrs. Morgan La Rue of Belvedere. Lisa will become the bride of Peter Frederick Waitneight at ceremonies Aug. 28 in Lansdale, Penn. The bride-elect lived in Belvedere as a child, and is the daughter of Mrs. John Falter of Lansdale and John J. Wiley of Belvedere. The La Rues will be traveling in the East for about a month.

MOTHERS AND daughters will attend the luncheon which Mrs. Richard Niswonger of Atherton is giving for debutante Gail Noah at the Presidio Golf Club on Wednesday. Mrs. Ralph Noah and Gail will join Mrs. Niswonger and her 13-year-old daughter, Carlyle, in greeting the other Marin debutantes and their mothers. The Niswongers lived in Belvedere for 12 years before moving to Atherton. Flower arrangements at the luncheon tables will feature individual nosegays, which will be given to the girls as party favors.

MR. AND MRS. Malcolm Dobbie of San Rafael will host a large dinner party at Sabella's of Marin on Aug. 28, immediately following the wedding and reception of their daughter, Judith, and Kenneth L. Brockrath of San Rafael. Among the guests will be Messrs. and Mesdames Edward Coker of Novato (the bride's sister); Albert Keller of Burlingame (another sister); Robert E. Rogers of San Francisco (her aunt and uncle); George Mehl of Redwood City; Gilbert Peters of South San Francisco; W. D. Nicol of San Anselmo; E. C. Marier of San Rafael; Karl Koehring of San Mateo and the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Rogers of San Francisco.

MRS. ERNEST BRAY of Greenbrae, and her two daughters, Barbara and Roberta, gave a large bridal shower recently at Sabella's of Marin in honor of Mrs. Bray's niece, Virginia Schomberg of Lafayette, who will be married August 28. The future bride's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Brown of Greenbrae.

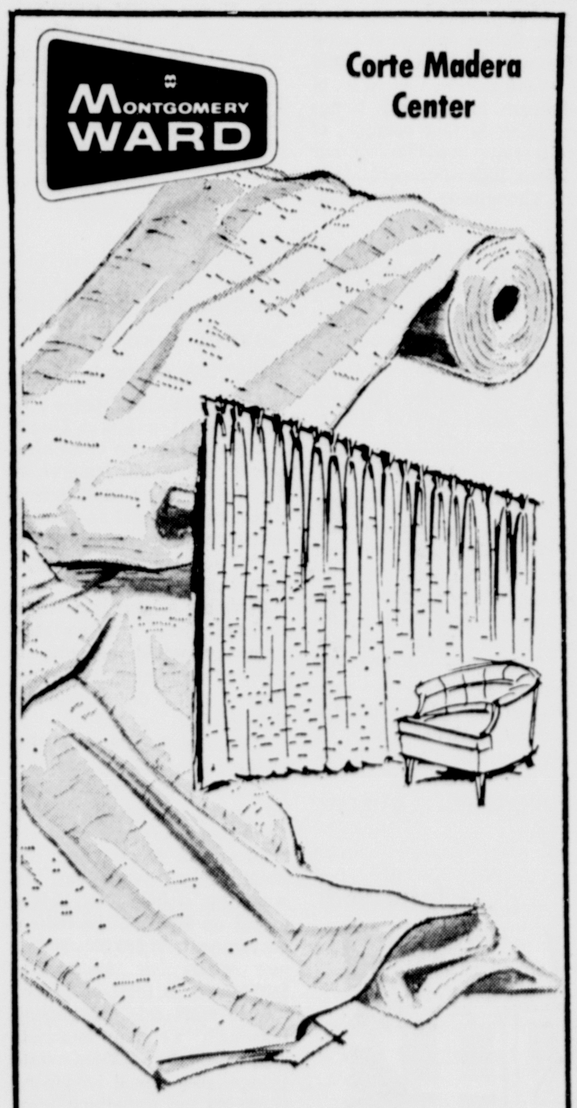

A LEISURELY TRIP through western Canada gave Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Glazer of Belvedere an opportunity for plenty of excellent fishing in Canada's icy mountain streams. The couple also visited Victoria and Vancouver before returning home last week.

Riots Are Understandable In Light Of Negro Poverty

THE OUTBREAKS OF riotous lawlessness in Watts probably will have the regrettable effect of setting back the progress of racial integration in the state and the nation.

Southern white supremacist-segregationists say the Negro is not capable of responsible behavior as a full citizen in our society; the Negro's background of ignorance and his low socio-economic status make him unfit for the obligations of responsible citizenship.

And the white supremacist-segregationist will now cite the Watts uprising and other similar episodes as proof of the contention that Negroes are not yet "ready" to assume the responsibilities of equal rights.

This argument will have weight with some and will inevitably slow down the processes of racial integration.

THE SIT-DOWN demonstrations at the Palace Hotel and along Van Ness Avenue in San Francisco prior to last year's election unquestionably helped bring about passage of Proposition 14 which has the effect of legalizing racial discrimination in housing.

That was another instance where the irresponsible acts of extremists among integration leaders resulted in setbacks for the civil right's struggle.

WHAT CAUSES THESE riots?

You can correctly say irresponsibility, ignorance, poverty, unemployment and other factors traceable to oppressive racial segregation.

Some will say they are Communist-inspired. But to dismiss the whole affair as plainly and simply the product of Communist agitation would be to fail to perceive the underlying conditions which would make incitement possible.

One root cause is 200 and more years of oppression of black skinned people in the U.S.A.

Oppression has a pressure cooker effect.

When you take the lid off, there is a blast of blistering steam.

When people commence to be released from oppression, there is steam-letting. As Negroes are accorded more and more equality, there will be riotous reactions.

When the spectre of the lynch mob goes, there is bound to be over-zealous celebrating.

WHERE DO WE LOOK for a solution?

The "war on poverty" can provide much of the answer.

We must provide better education for all our ignorant people. To win the war on poverty, we must first overcome ignorance.

Whether the present administration's program along these lines will accomplish this remains to be seen, If it doesn't, it will be because of inept administration and not because the basic idea is wrong.

All poverty stricken people, including Negroes, must be educated with twin goals in mind:

First, they must be educated toward responsible citizens in our self-governing society, and

Second, they must be educated and trained for work which will enable them to earn a decent living for themselves and their families.

Just as we have had to "muddle through" to victory in the "hot" wars of American history, now we must somehow muddle through to victory in the war on poverty.

Victory in the war on poverty can yet save our free enterprise system. Failure to conquer poverty and ignorance could spell the doom of our free enterprise system.

The Life Of The House Mouse

The federal government has given $3,000 to scientists at Southern Illinois University to do a one year study on the life and times of the house mouse.

As federal research grants go, this is peanuts. Considering that its eventual purpose is to be better control of this destructive pest, the government appears to be getting its money's worth.

Mice are a nuisance at the very least. At their worst, they are a foul, destructive, disease-breeding pest. We venture that this modest grant may do more for mankind than a million dollars shot into space.

Bouquets And Brickbats

A BOUQUET to the Red Cross for organizing swimming courses to aid the handicapped children. BOUQUETS also to the dedicated instructors who take personal interest in the welfare of the youngsters.

BOUQUETS to Marin Music Chest scholarship winners: Kenneth Bott, Paul Kent, Lois Clymer, David Wilkinson and Marsha Lang.

A BOUQUET to Mrs. Robert Rohner of San Anselmo, square dance caller for senior citizens, who has donated her time and services for more than five years. She even provides transportation for those who have no cars.

A BOUQUET to Mike Suyderhoud, 15, of San Anselmo, for winning the national boys over-all water skiing championship.

BRICKBATS to irresponsible hunters who have been firing high powered rifles in San Geronimo Valley without regard for the lives and safety of residents in the area.

A BRICKBAT to the tax consultant who understated the value of Fairchild Semi-Conductor Co. by more than a million dollars.

BOUQUETS to the helicopter firm for launching the Bay Area's first commercial hovercraft service between San Francisco and Oakland.

A BOUQUET to Michael McLean, who heads the sheriff's volunteer search and rescue unit, on his promotion to captain. McLean and his bloodhounds have volunteered their time services throughout the state for the past six years.

BOUQUETS to Marin's National Guardsmen, who answered the call of duty in the Los Angeles riot area on a moment's notice.

WARNING SYSTEM HAS NEW SAFEGUARDS

A "fail-safe" alarm is now on the market for home-owners who want a more dependable protection against fire and burglars.

It has heat-sensitive devices to detect fire and photoelectric eyes to record smoke. Once trouble starts, the system flashes a signal through telephone lines to a 24-hour control room in the neighborhood.

In this center a watchman deciphers the code and calls either the police or the fire department, depending on the nature of the disturbance.

The "fail-safe" part of the system is this: If the main current is broken, a dry cell battery temporarily takes over. And when the dry cell is getting weaker, a buzzer sounds in the house summoning a repairman.

It is only good sense to take precautions against fire, theft or other physical dangers. How much more, then, are we to guard ourselves and others against the enticements of the world, the flesh and the devil.

"I exhort you as strangers and pilgrims to abstain from carnal desires which war against the soul." (1 Peter 2:11)

Keep me ever on the alert, O Holy Spirit, to overcome dangers to my own soul or the souls of others.

Information Freedom Measure Is Backed

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Your editorial on the "Freedom of Information" bill (S. B. 1336) should become the basis for a letter-writing campaign urging our United States senators to support this bill without riders which would emasculate the provisions and intent of this vital legislation.

I intend to send copies of this editorial to friends and relatives in other states, asking that they, too, join in promoting the passage of S. B. 1336 by writing to their senators.

Shakespeare Fete Protest Obnoxious

Editor, Independent-Journal:

As a member of Saturday night's audience at "Romeo and Juliet," I feel moved to protest the obnoxious behavior of Mrs. Bunting and her family. Marin County may well be proud of its Shakespeare Festival. The fine efforts by the dedicated people who participate in it deserve all possible support, and deliberate sabotage such as that carried on by Mrs. Bunting and her children should not be tolerated.

Mrs. Bunting is in error — she does not have the right to play her hi-fi as loudly as possible if it disturbs others. Surely anyone moving near the Art and Garden Center is aware that activities have gone on there from time to time for years. If this not agreeable to them, they should move elsewhere. They do not have the right to come crashing down the hill, climbing trees (on the Center's property) and yelling taunts at the actors, as Mrs. Bunting's children did.

Mrs. Bunting betrays her own small-mindedness when she speaks of "long-haired foreigners." The members of the audience were a well-dressed, well-mannered group, desiring only to see a play without the annoyance of having it disrupted by the noise and shouting of ill-mannered children and adults. Mrs. Bunting had best curb those "instinctive reactions" of hers if she truly wishes to live in peace.

Is LBJ Preparing Viet Nam Surrender?

Editor, Independent-Journal:

One of President Johnson's techniques in his climb up the political ladder was the conditioning of public opinion.

That technique is being used today. Public opinion is being influenced by talk of 300,000 to 500,000 men in Viet Nam, of defeatism in the way things are going in that country, of the terrible hardships of our soldiers, lack of cooperation in the Vietnamese government, etc.

The day we sit down at the negotiating table the public will be ready to accept any terms for peace, just so we can bring our boys home.

Why should the president have a big meeting with the Senate and House of Representatives to discuss the terms of a peace treaty? All we have to say to the North Vietnamese is get out of the South and stay out. Work to make your own country a place worth living in and stop worrying about adding more people to live with you in misery. If you won't get out, we'll drive you out. It's as simple as that.

They are already violating a peace treaty. What makes us think they will live up to another one?

Late Teacher Honor Urged

Editor, Independent-Journal:

When school begins in September, one of San Rafael's finest teachers will be missing from the classroom. The untimely auto death of Mr. Ben Bloom, sixth grade teacher at West End School in San Rafael, has resulted in a great loss to the public school program. Mr. Bloom's unusual ability to inspire children and to lead them on to great heights of academic success will not be soon forgotten. This highly competent and creative teacher left a great contribution to the world in the lives of the children he taught during his brief career. I should like to suggest that children and parents alike who knew Mr. Bloom might perpetuate his work by contributing a book in his memory to the children's section of the San Rafael Public Library. Such deeds would be small, but the returns in the lives of young readers could be great.

Commuter Bus Line Sounds Like Bunk

Editor, Independent-Journal:

All the talk and press coverage about a Marin County commuter bus line to be operated by the county supervisors (in their role as rapid transit directors) . . . and paid for by Marin residents commuting in their own cars . . . seems rather unusual to me.

Certainly a large, successful national bus transportation company would be able to operate equipment cheaper than a small organization of this type. . . .

Most local transportation ventures in the past have resulted in the taxpayer picking up the annual red tab, as they do in San Francisco.

The press reports that this proposed one-horse bus line wants the Golden Gate Bridge to put up $900,000, the federal government $1,800,000 and a new county car tax another $900,000—or a total of $3,600,000—to start this experiment. Inasmuch as the motorists paid for the Golden Gate Bridge, they would be paying $1,800,000 for something most of them would not use—since most drivers today want their cars with them for various personal reasons.

It has been suggested that motorists commuting on the bridge be penalized by charging 50 cents for a car with one passenger, 25 cents for two, 10 cents for three, and free with four or more occupants. It is said this would encourage car pools and reduce the number of cars on the bridge. It would also produce an excellent snafu at the toll plaza while the collectors counted noses. . . .

I have the impression that some group is trying to mind everybody's business but their own—and I don't like it! . . .

Disarm Conference All But Over Shortly After It Gets Started

WASHINGTON (AP) — This country and Russia have good supplies of nuclear weapons and very fine statements. But, while they frighten each other with their weapons, they can't convince each other with their statements.

They have been talking to each other for 19 years about controlling their nuclear weapons and there's no reason to think they won't be doing it for another 19.

IN 1964 President Johnson, within less than two months after taking office, sent a message to the disarmament conference in Geneva, saying: "There is only one item on the agenda of this conference and that is peace."

The conference went on for months afterwards and then broke up.

Last month Johnson sent another message, this time to the 17-nation disarmament conference opening in Geneva July 27. It sounded like the 1964 message.

"NOTHING," he said, "is more important than the effort to halt the spread of nuclear power and bring the weapons of war under increased control."

But the conference opened on a sour note, for the chief Soviet negotiator, Semyon K. Tsarapkin, said there was no hope of agreement on a treaty to halt the spread of nuclear weapons so long as the West insists on building up a multilateral nuclear force, including West Germany.

The United States has wanted to create a nuclear force within the NATO alliance, particularly since NATO seems to be drooping. It would include Germany. In addition to the United States, Britain and France are the only NATO powers with nuclear force.

THIS WEEK the United States unveiled its proposal for a treaty. Before it did, Johnson sent another message, saying the "fate of generations yet unborn" is in the hands of the Geneva conference.

THE KEY article in the American proposal had a sweep to it, even though it was patched together in a hurry at the last minute. What the article left unsaid is what the Russians found wrong with it.

It called on each nuclear power to undertake "not to transfer any nuclear weapons into the national control of any non-nuclear state, either directly or indirectly through a military alliance and each undertakes not to take any other action which would cause an increase in the total number of states and other organizations having independent power to use nuclear weapons."

It might take a while to digest all that but what was left unsaid turned out to be this:

UNDER THE United States proposal it could go ahead and set up the NATO nuclear force (which the Russians said it wouldn't buy) and West Germany, although a non-nuclear power, could be included which the Russians don't want.

Presumably, the United States, Britain, and France, since they would be the only powers among the Allies with nuclear weapons of their own, would have a veto on any use of them.

The Russians said the American proposal was not worth discussing. Even before the United States introduced its proposal a Soviet official said: "Today the West creates a newborn baby — a stillborn one."

BARKER ON CHINA

Some Questions, But No Answers

By GEORGE BARKER

HERE ARE SOME questions that trouble me. I've got opinions, but opinions aren't really answers. Perhaps you know the answers.

Many people seem to regard China as the number one threat to world peace. Yet China has not one soldier on foreign soil, while the U.S. has troops and bases in Japan, Taiwan, the Philippines, South Korea, South Viet Nam and Thailand — all around China's perimeter. Looking at it objectively, is China such an aggressive power? Why is the mighty, industrially powerful United States so frightened of weak, impoverished China? Can it be all attributed to the fact they are communistic? Could part of it be that they are a different race that we don't understand because there is little communication between our two countries?

Is it fair to damn China's commune system of farming, when, right here in the U.S., the small farm is disappearing and being consolidated into bigger and bigger, more profitable units? Have we a true picture of life on the communes? How much of the lack of privacy is due to the communes? And how much is just the result of living in an overcrowded land? Have the Chinese ever had complete political freedom?

DO THE PEOPLE really love Chairman Mao? Doesn't history show that, given time, people repudiate tyrannical leaders and deify saintly ones? Why not let the Chinese people decide whether he is Abraham Lincoln or Genghis Khan? Can we afford to wait? Can we afford not to wait?

If we decide to rush history, and maybe find ourselves at war with China, what happens then? If we fight them to a stalemate, what have we gained? If, as is highly unlikely, they surrender, what do we do then with the hundreds of millions of backward, hungry people we inherit — the world's biggest headache and heartache? Are we so wise that we can solve China's problems when the Chinese haven't been able to? How does one go about pulling 650 million people into the 20th Century? Is it part of the Pentagon's contingency planning?

Since Viet Nam is supposed to be a battleground in our crusade to contain Chinese communism, some questions come to mind about that unfortunate country or countries, depending on how you look at it. Our men on the ground have trouble telling the Viet Cong from the average nonpolitical peasant. How then do our airmen tell one from the other? When dropping napalm, do we just take it for granted that it is necessary to incinerate some ordinary peasants to kill Viet Cong? Why do we no longer hear from Washington that "we must win the hearts and minds of the people?" Could it be that we are failing in this? If we are fighting against the South Vietnamese people, how do we square this with the American concept of liberty and justice?

UNDER THE domino theory of this dirty, little war, we are saving South Viet Nam to keep the rest of Southeast Asia from going Communist. If one goes, all topple. Is this true? Or is it merely a vivid analogy? What about Cambodia, Indonesia and Singapore—already leaning toward Peking?

One final question: What if Southeast Asia did go Communist? Can we save people unless they really want to be saved? And if people really want to be saved, can any force on earth enslave them for long? Could it be that the problems of Southeast Asia are so immense that they might become the quicksand in which communism would flounder and sink?

Pentagon Aides In Ads For Defense Contractor

By JULES WITCOVER
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON — Pentagon public information officials have been appearing as paid models in magazine advertisements for the Bell Telephone System, the nation's seventh-largest defense contractor.

At least four civilian and military officials have appeared in the nationwide ads and others have posed for them. In most cases, the men were paid $50 for their services by a free-lance photographer's agent.

The general counsel's office in the Defense Department has indicated the men did not violate any conflict-of-interest regulation. The ads do not carry any pentagon endorsement nor are the men identified with the department or by rank, name or job title.

Nevertheless, a spokesman for the Bell System says he expects use of Pentagon employees will be discontinued from now on. The identity of the models "frankly came as a great surprise to us," says Philip Taylor, Bell public relations man in Washington. The ads are part of a current series depicting sales executives pondering ways to expand sales contacts and suggesting greater use of long-distance telephoning.

Pentagon regulations permit "moonlighting"—off-hours work—as long as it does not interfere with a man's regular duties and may not "reasonably be expected to bring discredit" upon the government.

The Bell System and its largest segments, the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (AT&T) and Western Elec. tric Co., did $635.6 million worth of business with the Department of Defense in the 1964 fiscal year, the latest for which totals are available.

Three of the men appearing in the ads, one of whom no longer works for the government, readily acknowledge posing for the ads and say they see no impropriety involved. They note they are not identified in the ads and they dealt with and were paid by a photographer's agent, not the defense contractor. A fourth man is on duty overseas.

Two are working in the Pentagon now. One is Navy Capt. Walter J. Ellis, deputy director for news in the department's public affairs directorate for information services. He is the No. 2 man in the Pentagon office that handles information to newspapers, magazines, book publishers and authors. He appeared in an ad that ran in late May.

The other is Norman T. Hatch, a former Marine who is civilian chief of the radio-TV news branch in the office of public affairs. This branch dispenses news, film, tape and in general provides facilities and assistance to radio and TV reporters. Hatch's picture is in the current ad.

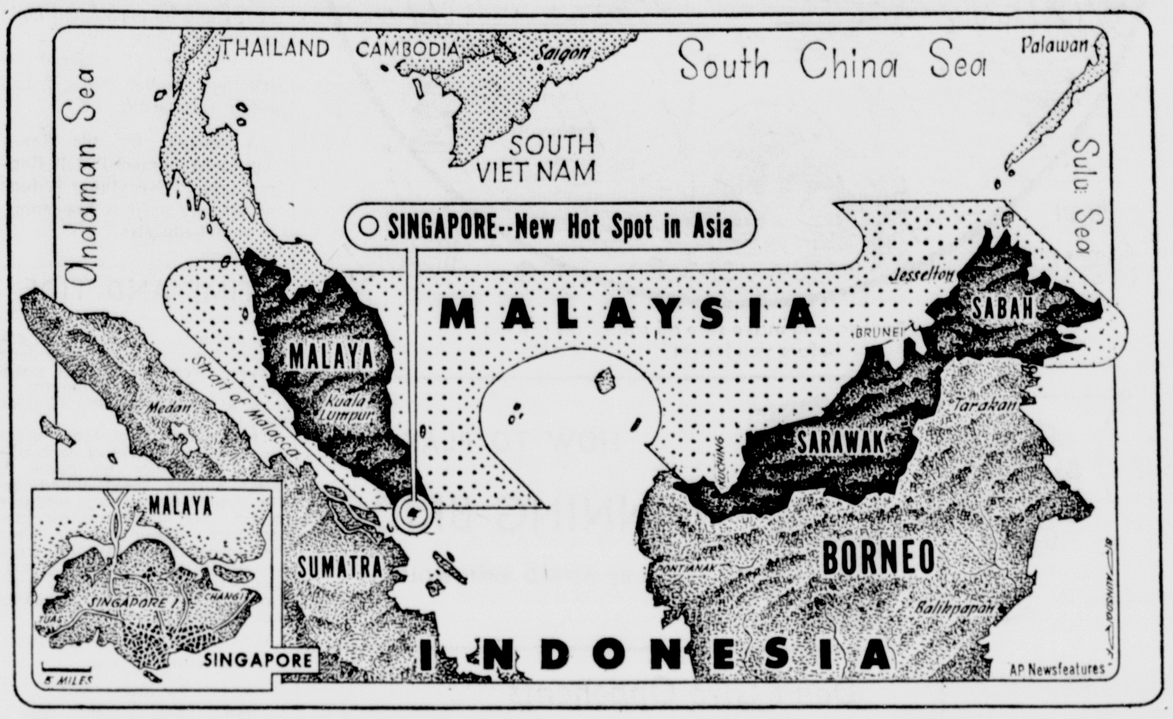

The third recent model is Lt. Col. William Ellington, who worked for the Army office of information in the Pentagon until transferred overseas recently. He appeared in an ad in mid-July.

The first Pentagon official to appear in the ad, then Col. Eugene E. Surdyk of the Army office of information, posed nearly three years ago. Surdyk since has retired and is a public relations man in Washington for Ling-Temco-Vought Inc., which was ranked No. 22 in defense contracts last year.

Surdyk says he was approached by an Army information officer on behalf of the photographer's agent, Arnold Caplan of New York City.

Surdyk checked with the office of the Army Judge Advocate before accepting the work, he says, and was assured orally that no regulation would be violated as long as he did not wear a uniform and was not hiring out to anyone doing business with the government.

Ellis and Hatch say they saw no conflict in the arrangement and never would have agreed to appear in a nationwide ad if they thought there was any. The fact the ads have appeared with the men's advance knowledge in some of the nation's most widely circulated magazines reinforces their view that they had nothing to hide.

Singapore Again Raises Asia Problem

By Richard F. NEWCOMB
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Was Singapore pushed or did it jump?

No matter, the fabled isle is no longer part of Malaysia, and that raises more problems than it settles.

Maylasia was from the start, an artificial nation. The British, with the acquiesence of the leaders, finally stuck it together two years ago of two long-time neighbors, Singapore and Malaya, and two left-over states on the island of Borneo, Sabah and Sarawak. Indonesia had long since taken the rest of Borneo, and from the start had vowed to "crush Malaysia."

Indonesia has tried, sending its guerrilla forces against Sabah and Sarawak, infiltrating soldiers into Malaya, cutting off trade with Singapore. But it wasn't Indonesia that blew Singapore out of Malaysia. It was the built-in dynamite of racial hatred.

Slightly over half the population of Malaysia was Chinese, with Malays the largest minority. Every country in Southeast Asia has a large Chinese population.

These are known as the "overseas Chinese", and by and large they are hard-working, ingenious businessmen. As a result, they often control the economic life of the cities.

This is true in Indonesia as well as in Singapore, and it makes few friends. In Malaysia, the result has been rising racial tensions, evidenced by bloddy Chinese-Malay riots for more than a year.

Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman strove to hold the races together, finally decided he could no longer do so except at the risk of a national blood-bath. Premier Lee Kwan Yew of Singapore agreed, reportedly with a broken heart, that Singapore would have to leave Malaysia.

Indonesia at first chortled that the Chinese of Singapore would now be brought into the Indonesia-Red China camp. But it was nowhere near that simple. World trade is the life-blood of Singapore, the world's fifth largest port.

But the 217-square-mile island is also Britain's Far East military headquarters. Lee is Chinese, but warned that if the British withdrew their bases from Singapore "not only Singapore will be destroyed by Indonesia, but I think the Federation of Malaysia will also be crushed. We will together be crushed."

Singapore is now independent, already recognized by many countries, including the United States. Whether it can long remain independent is the question. The tiny island will be a great prize for East or West.

Economically it could stand alone, as the richest trading center in Southeast Asia. Militarily, it cannot. If the British leave, said Lee, "the Indonesian army would be in Singapore tomorrow." In the next breath, Lee said Singapore wanted trade and friendship with Indonesia.

That would seem to be hardly enough for President Sukarno. Indonesia wants the power and prestige of bringing Singapore over to the Communist side. That has not yet been accomplished. Singapore is severed, but Malaysia is not crushed.

It may be a long time before it is.

SENATOR BLASTS U.S. IN BUSINESS

Utah's Bennett, Former NAM President, Trying To Get Business To Run Business

BY EDWARD J. MOWERY
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON — Since World War I, congressmen have occasionally needled their colleagues into fits of righteous wrath the vast commercial-industrial domain of the federal government. The general theme: Take government out of business!

Unhappily, the periodical thunder drones into a whisper. And Uncle Sam blithely continues to operate an estimated 18,300 business-type enterprises spanning more than 100 general commercial categories.

The latest lawmaker to mount the anti-encroachment white charger is Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R—Utah, 67-year-old Salt Lake City businessman and former president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

He has introduced a bill to put teeth into a Budget Bureau directive to the bureaucrats to halt government competition with private business.

"Government-run businesses today," Bennett said, "probably total 20,000 or more. Their capital investment is estimated at anywhere from $30 billion to $150 billion, no one knows for sure.

"Such large-scale, non-tax-paying competition hits at the concept and performance of private enterprise. Congress is in nearly unanimous agreement that the government should get out of activities traditionally done better, cheaper and faster by private industry. Like Congress, President Johnson regards the question . . . as a matter of public principle."

A nicely put and noble blueprint. But where will it get?

The first congressional stab at compilation of a federal property-inventory came in 1953 when the second Hoover Commission was directed to gather data leading to elimination of competitive federal "nonessential services."

The next year, military warehouse stocks alone were tentatively valued at $66 billion. A few months later, the House reported: "The U.S. government does not issue a financial statement (like) all large businesses, and lists only its liabilities (then $275 billion). A comprehensive property inventory should be undertaken."

By 1956, "certain" government commercial-industrial activities had been tallied. The inch-thick inventory loaded with tables showed that "installations" totaled 19,771 with total capital assets of $11.8 billion. Since 1956, bureaucrats have whittled and shaved . . . and expanded. Bennett explains:

"Today, the government manufactures watches, clothes, furniture, bed-springs, brooms, leather goods, machinery, mailbags and wooden crates. It cans fruit, packs meat, runs foundries, railroads, steamships, airlines, farms and laundries."

Uncle Sam's experts will also cut your hair, serve you a meal, shine and repair your shoes, clean your chapeau . . . and shod your horse.

The whole mess, Bennett declared, started in the 1850s when military personnel squawked about the poor quality of GI coffee. So, the armed services bought their own coffee beans and roasted them. And they're still grinding their own coffee. Forests of federal enterprises grew from the lowly bean.

Government-run business, ever since, has been a goliath.

The senator, battling for an updated inventory and a law to slice commerce out of uncle Sam's varied endeavors, commented sagely:

"Bureau-run businesses continue to grow long after the original need has ceased. As long as tax-money is made available, agencies generate ways to spend it."

This "instinct for survival," he added, is enjoyed at taxpayers' expense.

Eyes Focus On Riot Disaster

By EDWIN S. CAPPS

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — The State of California—accustomed to dealing with "acts of God" disasters all too frequently—found itself faced with a riot-caused disaster of even greater proportions in Los Angeles this week.

A state of emergency finally was declared and Gov. Edmund G. Brown was forced to cut short a European vacation to return to the scene. The national guard was mobilized to restore law and order.

Before the sniper rifles were silenced and the crash of broken store windows and shuffle of looting ended, attempts were underway to lay the cause or blame of the Negro - dominated outbreak, which saw nearly three dozen persons killed and nearly 3,000 arrested.

Unfortunately, most of the causes of the uproar already were fairly obvious—a slum area filled with unemployed persons of low cultural background, the inciting of racial rebels, and a general lack of respect for law and order, aided and abetted by so-called leaders.

A seven-member "blue ribbon" commission will be appointed by Brown to study the disorder, probably with an eye toward taking steps to prevent a repetition. Meanwhile, one controversy has developed already over whether the slow development of the anti-poverty program in the area contributed to the riots. And there was a question as to why the program hasn't got off the ground.

Los Angeles Mayor, Samuel Yorty, charged anti - poverty funds were cut off, with attendant publicity, pending efforts of the city to reorganize the youth opportunities board "to meet the chameleonics Office of Economic Opportunity criteria." Yorty said the city was subjected to "federal whims which are confusing, changing and arbitrary." But R. Sargent Shriver, commander-in-chief of the anti-poverty war, said millions already had been spent in Los Angeles and the city stood out in the nation as a horrible example of failure to cooperate with the program.

Hale Champion, state director of finance who took command behind the scenes during Brown's absence, made some reports on what it cost the taxpayers to quell the rioting. By Tuesday costs of national guard operations alone had mounted to $727,862 and were running about $225,000 per day. The California highway patrol was using some $50,000 in backing up the Los Angeles police, while disaster office expenses of emergency food distribution amounted to nearly $12,000.

Stafford R. Grady, state insurance commissioner, was in consultation with insurance company representatives. He said the companies were anxious to settle all legitimate claims but would need active cooperation from policy holders. Grady advised damaged firms and individuals to report the loss, make accurate inventories and that they were obligated to protect and preserve their property as much as possible. Meanwhile, John A. O'Kane, superintendent of banks, issued an emergency regulation authorizing banks in the designated emergency areas to remain closed if it was felt necessary.

On another front, James O. Reimel, state director of alcoholic beverage control, said the state's credit law—which requires the charging of 2 per cent interest on retailer-to-wholesaler liquor bills unpaid after 30 days— would be relaxed for affected businesses. Reimel said he would work with local authorities to ask them to waive waiting periods, wherever possible, for liquor licensees who must move to new premises. Reimel said there are about 1500 licensees of all types in the Watts area and an estimated 150 were wiped out or damaged in the rioting.

Another disaster — partially man-made and partly the result of unseasonal rains in the peach and tomato producing areas of the central valley—was developing. Losses to the cling peach crop have been estimated at about $13 million, due to the brown rot which developed quickly following the rain and humid weather. Losses also were mounting in the canning tomato crops, due to insufficient harvest labor. In the Merced area, growers reported 20 per cent of the crop already had been lost and the labor supply was continuing to dwindle. The department of employment office in the area said it was unable to fill job orders.

Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., told Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, he was shocked at the secretary's approval of only 8,000 Mexican braceros for the tomato harvest. Growers had asked for about 24,000 workers and the state department of employment certified the need for some 13,800. "Your cutback of authorization to 8,000 has shocked me and the tomato growers who planted in reliance on your assertion they would have sufficient labor to harvest their crop and who have carefully followed your criteria for eligibility," Murphy said in a wire to Wirtz.

The chairman of the assembly committees on elections and reapportionment, Assemblyman Don A. Allen, Sr., D-Los Angeles, has charged the State Senate never was serious earlier this year in trying to pass a bill to set up new districts for the Senate on a population basis. However, Allen said he was willing to have another try at redistricting if a special session of the legislature is called later this year. Senators had charged Allen's committee bottled up their reapportionment bill and made changes which were totally unacceptable.

Reds Stand Still; Marines Attack

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ever since they got to Viet Nam the Marines have been hoping for it—a set piece, where a big body of Viet Cong would stand still long enough to get clobbered. Finally it happened.

Intelligence disclosed that at least 2,000 members of the crack 1st Viet Cong Regiment were dug in on Van Tuong peninsula, 70 miles south of Da Nang, only 12 miles from a new American base at Chu Lai. If the Viet Cong could be pinned with his back to the sea, he could be destroyed in the old hammer-and-anvil style of World War II.

At dawn Wednesday, the Marines attacked. Strong forces cut the peninsula at both sides of a narrow neck. A third force, landing from the sea by helicopters, plugged the gap in the middle. Then they poured it on.

By yesterday it was all over. More than three-fourths of the 2,000 Viet Cong were killed, wounded or captured, along with large quantities of arms and equipment. The counted Viet Cong dead stood at 563, the biggest bag ever. Specific Marine casualties were not announced. Officials said they were "light" in relation to the force committed, perhaps 4,000 Marines in all. A Viet Cong stronghold, "one of the toughest," had been wiped out.

The riots were over in Los Angeles, but the bitterness remained. Gov. Edmund G. Brown, naming an eight-member board to probe the cause and make recommendations to prevent a recurrence, gave the official toll of the violence that had shaken the nation:

Thirty-six dead—all but three Negroes, almost 1,000 injured, more than 4,000 jailed, over 500 buildings looted or burned, damage of $100 million.

Twelve thousand National Guardsmen had been withdrawn from Los Angeles, but 3,000 remained on duty, guarding the shaky peace.

Heading Brown's investigating committee was John A. McCone, chief of the Central Intelligence Agency from 1961 to last May 1, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission under President Dwight D. Eisenhower, and now a director of half a dozen companies. Serving with him will be five other white persons and two Negroes, all of them prominent in the Los Angeles area.

At last the United States swallowed the bitter pill. In his maiden speech to the United Nations, Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg disclosed that the United States accepted "regretfully" that Article 19 of the U.N. Charter should not be enforced. Article 19 says that any member of the United Nations more than two years in arrears in payments shall not be allowed to vote. In this class are the Soviet Union, which owes $62.2 million; France, in arrears $17.5 million, and 11 other countries which owe a total of $27 million.

The decision not to force a showdown had been President Johnson's, based on recommendations by Goldberg and Secretary of State Dean Rusk. The Soviet Union had refused to pay for U.N. peacekeeping operations in the Congo and the Middle East, France in the Congo.

In announcing the American retreat, Goldberg had warned that, in the future, if the United States didn't like something the United Nations did, it, too, would refuse to pay.

The 17 defendants looked like any other group of middle-aged Germans, but they were different. All had worked at Auschwitz, Hitler's infamous extermination camp in Poland where three million or more Jews, Gypsies, Poles and Russians had been put to death in World War II. All but one had been members of the terrorist Nazi SS guard. After a 20-month trial, the longest in West German history, they had been convicted of torture and murder and awaited sentence.

In the Frankfurt courtroom, Judge Hans Hofmeyer said, "Human life is too short to expiate the crimes committed at Auschwitz." Then he sentenced six of the defendants to life imprisonment at hard labor, the sternest sentence possible.

Insurance Firms Might Make Settlement Efforts In Watts

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Stafford R. Grady, state insurance commissioner, said he had "every assurance that the insurance companies will make every effort to provide prompt and satisfactory settlement" for damages suffered in the Los Angeles riots.

Grady reported this in a letter to Governor Brown. Another top state official, John A. O'Kane, state superintendent of banks, issued an emergency regulation permitting banks in the affected area to close during the period of emergency.

Grady said there had been some "unfortunate and premature statements" that insurance companies would decline to pay losses incurred in the recent riots. He said he had held discussions with representative segments of the insurance industry to determine which fire and other property and casualty losses would be covered.

"Obviously there are thousands of different contracts of insurance involving several different classes of coverage which must be considered," he said. "Although each claim must be resolved under the terms of a particular contract, the insurance department is making every effort to obtain a degree of uniformity of interpretation of the factual basis giving rise to the claim."

Grady suggested three steps for those persons who suffered lossess during the recent outbreaks:

1. Examine the insurance policies and report the facts to an agent or broker and file claims and proofs of loss if it appears there is a claim.

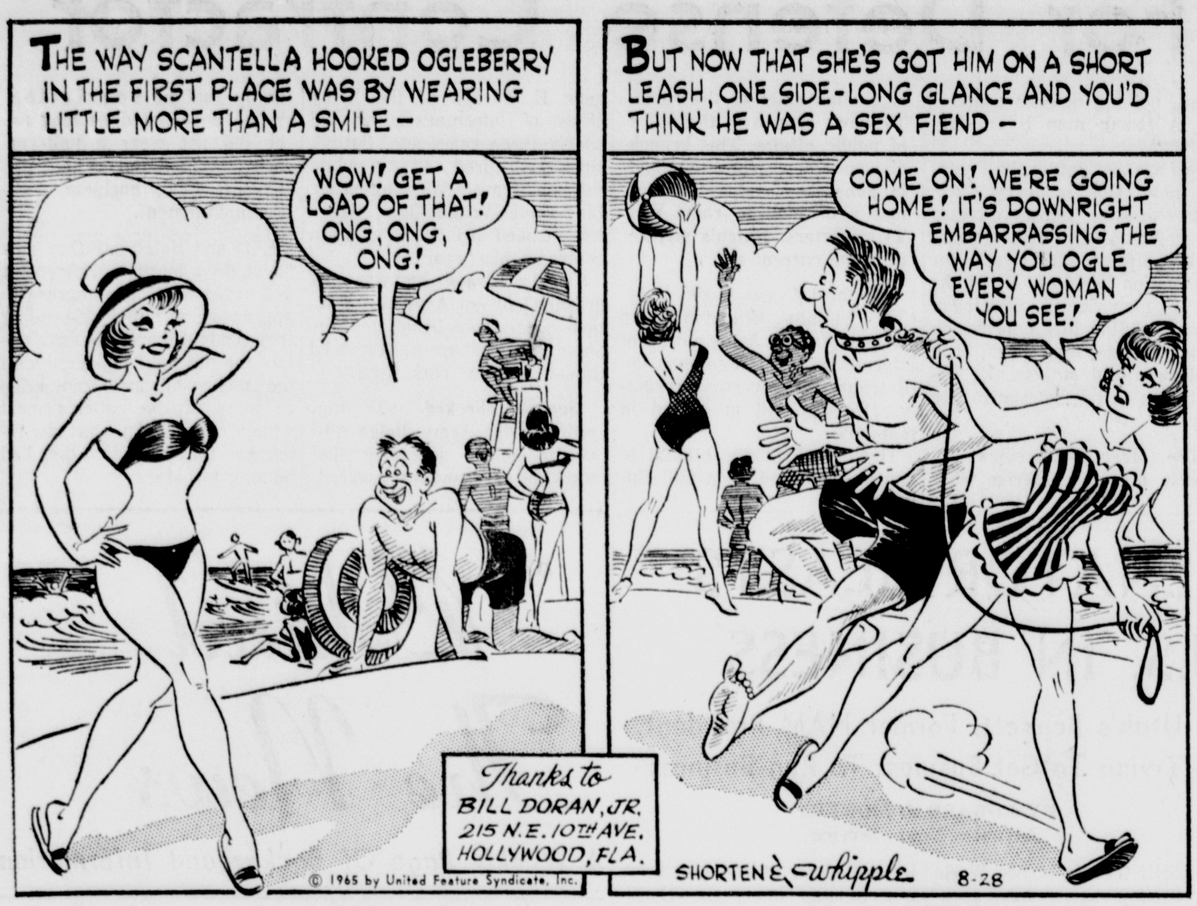

2. Make an accurate inventory or list of losses and preserve books and records as much as possible.

3. Subject to instructions of the authorities and without exposing a person or his employees to danger, persons should take all reasonable steps to protect themselves and their property from further loss or deterioration. Most policies require the insured to protect and preserve property from further loss both at and after the event causing damage.

(In the Baldwin Hills disaster, when widespread damage was caused by a break in the dam, special legislation was approved for the state to pay claims to the damaged persons immediately, pending settlement by the insurance firms.

(Similar action would be possible at this time if the legislature considered such emergency payments when it meets in special session, expected to be in early October.)

South put up the queen of diamonds at the first trick, East covered with the king, and South won with the ace. Declarer led a club to dummy's ace and returned a heart, losing the king to the ace.

HEART TO QUEEN

West returned a heart to the queen, and South ruffed a heart in dummy. Now declarer returned a diamond, and East took the jack.

East returned a trump, hoping to reduce dummy's ruffing power, and South allowed this to ride to dummy's seven.

Thus far nobody could find a flaw in South's method of playing the hand. That came soon, for South ruffed a club and led a diamond, ruffing with dummy's nine of trumps.

COST GAME

This was South's sporting play, and it cost him the game and rubber.

East over-ruffed with the king and led another trump to clear out the last trump from the dummy.

South still had a losing diamond in his hand and couldn't eat it since the opponents were watching him too closely.

THIRD ROUND

A less sporting South would make sure of the contract by ruffing the third round of diamonds with the ace of trumps instead of the nine.

South would then return to his hand by ruffing a club and ruff his last diamond with dummy's nine.

East could take his king of trumps then or later, but he could not defeat the contract.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass.

You have 11 points in high cards and 2 points for the two doubletons. With a total of 13 points you have an optional opening bid but decline the option since you should devalue the queen of diamonds. If your queen were in either black suit, accompanying an ace, you would give it full value and would open the bidding.

California's Freeways Rivalled In Europe

By ALTON S. BOCK
(Last in a series)

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — California, day by day, is extending and widening its complex of freeways. For some time now it has been considered the land of automobile, and it's something of a shock to discover that it has serious rivals in several European nations.

Not that the building of superhighways in Europe is a big business. Road construction there has a harder time keeping up with the glut of traffic than here. Inadequate roads in many areas contribute to the impression of automobiles everywhere. You might think that Europe just discovered the auto, and in a sense it has. Visitors abroad 10 years age reported very few cars in proportion to bicycles and motorscooters.

Now the situation is different. "Everything in Torino is for the Fiat," the manager of our hotel there told us. We bought a small sedan at the factory there; later in Rome our car was one of thousands in a nightmare of Fiats wildly spinning around the city's fountains or caught in traffic jams on the crowded avenues. It's true that the wealth and power of Italy's northern cities today are directly associated with the automobile industry. And of course the automobile in Europe is crucial to the common market.

The French countryside, especially during the annual August vacation, is flooded by cars, and accidents are common. There may be a high number of traffic deaths in California, but France and Germany have the dubious privilege of recording far many more each year, proportionate to the number of drivers.

Despite the hazards, however, there probably are not many more pleasant roads to travel on then the highways and lanes of the French countryside. A typical road, lined by sycamores, runs through long valleys, over peaceful rivers, through great forests of oak and chestnut. Although inhabited for many centuries, there still is a remarkable lack of clutter along the roadsides or at the edges of towns.

Superhighways, usually toll, aren't altogether lacking. Even more remote places such as Greece have good ones now near more densely populated areas. New four-lane roads are being built in Turkey, and toll-free, divided highways now stretch right through the middle of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria. Although in those countries traffic as yet is no particular problem, for all the new roadway. And in Greece and Turkey there is a distinct impression that most of the cars are taxicabs.

An apparent abundance of automobiles is related to the fact that Europeans are travelling more. Those who can afford cars can afford to use them, and new resort areas are bustling from the coast of Spain to the islands of Greece. Skyscraping hotels and apartments in the resort towns around Malaga on Spain's Costa del Sol are beginning to make the region look like South Lake Tahoe—and the European tourists who occupy them far outnumber the Americans.

The noise of modern America is something one doesn't expect to find in European cities. Although Paris has prohabited the use of auto horns, there is a constant roar of traffic. And the Istanbul taxi drivers seem extraordinarily fond of tooting relentlessly, whether or not anybody is in the way. It was therefore somehow weird when, arriving in New York, the city noted for sound and fury, everything was quiet on the streets. Quiet, at least, compared to the automobile-packed cities of modern Europe.

Language Lab Contract Recommendation Delayed

Coast Visual Education of Oakland was the apparent low bidder yesterday on equipping foreign language laboratories at San Rafael High School.

The firm was one of four which submitted bids, according to Schools Business Mgr. Charles L. Condrotte.

Other bids came from Miller's Radio and TV of Oakland, McCune Sounds of San Francisco and AV Electronics of Fresno.

While Coast Visual's $6,900 bid was low on a conventional laboratory booth arrangement, Condrotte said three of the firms bid on several alternates allowing the labs to be made into classrooms.

The same firm appeared to have the low bid on these alternates, but Condrotte declined to predict what his recommendation to the San Rafael Board of Education would be until he studied the bids further.

Condrotte said he hopes to make a recommendation when the board meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the former E Street School.

Vandals Smash School Windows

Loss of a portable radio and breaking of 10 windows in a burglary and vandalism at John MacPhail's School in Santa Venetia was reported today by sheriff's officers.

Deputies said Leslie E. Hicks, custodian, stated entry was via a south window of the office building, Tuesday or early Wednesday. The windows were shattered with large rocks.

Charles James Pastori, 1756 Centro West, Tiburon, reported his pickup truck — parked at home — was broken into Wednesday and a tool chest containing a large number of tools was stolen.

No value estimate was given.

Marine Reserve Duty Begins For Marin Pair

Two Marin County men reported to the Marine Recruit Depot, San Diego, this week to start six months' active duty under the Marine Reserves program.

They are Clyde J. Armstrong Jr. of 121 Jewell Court, San Rafael, and Kenneth D. Dawson of 80 Matilda Avenue, Mill Valley.

Cleric Questions America's Justice In Viet Nam War

U.S. Citizens Urged To Ponder Responsibility For Happenings

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

A distinguished Roman Catholic theologian this week raised a question that Americans of all faiths may ponder:

Is the United States fighting a just war in Viet Nam? Or is it getting ever more deeply involved in the fundamentally immoral action for which ordinary citizens must share the guilt?

The Rev. George Tavard, professor of theology at Mount Mercy College, Pittsburgh, clearly leans toward the latter views. But he is not so much concerned with airing his own opinion as with getting the American people to accept their corporate responsibility for thinking through the moral implications of what this country is doing in Viet Nam.

In an article published by the National Catholic Reporter, Fr. Tavard says "the increasing involvement of the United States in the Vietnamese civil war is having the effect that Americans are less and less conscious of the issue as a proper and even necessary object for moral judgment."

This is not surprising, he says, because "the more a nation is engaged in a war, the less the act of war appears as corresponding to a moral choice, taking as it does, for the average citizen, the aspect of unavoidable necessity."

"This was the case with the German nation in World War II, and also with the Allies, who as the war dragged on, adopted more and more the methods of total warfare advocated by their enemies."

If humanity learned one clear lesson from World War II, Fr. Tavard says, it was that "responsibility for war and war crimes did not lie only with the leadership of nations," but was shared by every citizen who passively acquiesced.

Fr. Tavard believes that the moral issue in Viet Nam has been confused by the fact that many of the protests against U.S. policy have come from American religious leaders who are identified with a pacifist viewpoint.

But you don't have to be a pacifist, he says, to be troubled in conscience by President Johnson's course.

"There are moral reasons to object to this policy, even if one holds the use of force to be morally permissible in certain cases."

The dominant moral principle at stake, he contends, is that "the people of any given nation have a native right to make a revolution without the interference of foreign power."

"This is not to say that governments may not protect themselves from subversion by calling on the assistance of other countries or of international bodies; yet it is to say that foreign governments or international bodies may not interfere to keep in power a government which could certainly collapse otherwise. . ."

"The argument for armed involvement is based on the duty of the American government to help South Viet Nam preserve its freedom from Communist dictatorship; yet, the more American power is present and active in South Viet Nam, the less possibility the Vietnamese people have of deciding on whose side they are, for what started as a revolt is turning fast into a war of liberation from the presence of a foreign army."

Fr. Tavard would be the first to say that he is voicing one theologian's opinion, and not an "official" view of the Catholic church. U.S. religious leaders are of several minds about the war in Viet Nam. Some feel that President Johnson is doing the best he can in a well-nigh impossible situation. The sharpest criticism of U.S. policy has hitherto come from Protestant and Jewish leaders. Fr. Tavard, whose stature is attested by his appointment as an expert consultant to the Vatican Council, is the first prominent Catholic theologian to take a strong public stand against the war.

Baptist Scholar Joins Catholic College Faculty

DE PERE, Wisc. (UPI) — A Roman Catholic college here has hired a Canadian Baptist scholar as a theology department faculty member as a means of keeping pace with ecumenical developments.

Father Vincent J. DeLeers, dean of St. Norbert's College, announced the appointment of Leslie R. Keylock, 32, a doctoral candidate in the theology department of the University of Iowa. "It is our judgement that a theology department, if it is to represent what is happening in the world of theology, has to be internally involved in the dialogue which is current among theologians," Father DeLeers said.

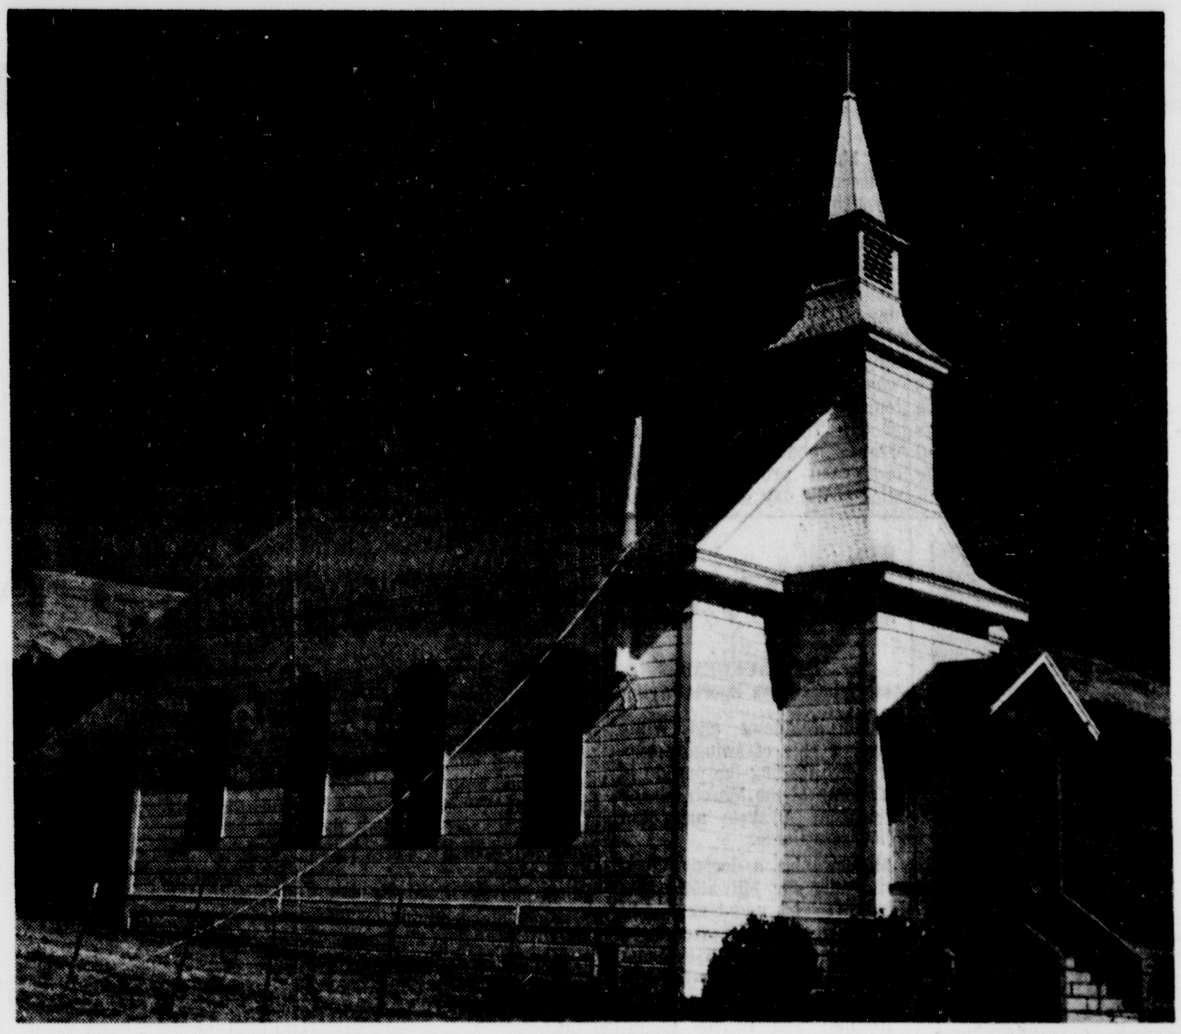

Divinity School Offers New Chair

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI)— The Yale Divinity School has established a Luther A. Weigle Visiting Professorship, starting next academic year. The chair honors the Rev. Luther A. Weigel of New Haven for his distinguished contributions as teacher, writer, editor and as Dean of the Yale Divinity School from 1928 to 1949.

The professorship will bring to Yale each year a world-renowned scholar, often from an overseas university, to participate in the instructional program of the School, Dean Robert C. Johnson said.

Christian Science

Christian Science churches throughout Marin County will hear a Bible Lesson tomorrow on God as divine "Mind." The responsive reading will include a familiar verse from Proverbs: "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding."

CHURCH TO GET PLAQUE

A special marker designating Our Lady of Loretta Church as a Marin County historical spot will be placed before the little church in Nicasio at 1 p.m., Aug. 29, in ceremonies including the congregation and members of Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West parlors in the county. Raymond Shone, past state grand of the NSGW, will be master of ceremonies. A stone pillar on which the plaque will be installed is now being built, just out of camera range in the right foreground. In the morning before the rites, Rev. John G. Connery, who serves both the Nicasio mission and St. Cecelia's in Lagunitas, will celebrate a special mass in the church, which was established in 1867. SISTER MARY GILBERT
Writing and religion

Literary Stature Won By A Teaching Sister

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — When people meet the woman who wrote the poems in "From the Darkroom," they usually assume all of the poetry is going to be religious.

The assumption may seem reasonable on the surface. But it's a mistake, says Sister Mary Gilbert, poet, teacher and member of the Congregation of Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary.

"I think nuns might be more reluctant than laymen to write religious poetry," she says. "I find, for instance, that many of the symbols that are meaningful to me don't communicate to other people. Also, if you are using this material you have to be very good or you will really fall flat."

Sister Gilbert, an associate professor of English at Fort Wright College of the Holy Names in Spokane, is one of a growing number of men and women in religious orders who are making their mark in literature.

Interviewed at Seattle University, a Jesuit institution where she is teaching this year on a leave from the Spokane school, she said:

"Some people seem to think that being a member of a religious order would be restrictive as to writing. But I don't feel this as far as poetry is concerned. I feel more free than I would be otherwise."

When it comes to fiction, she finds the situation a little different.

"I don't think in general we are very habituated to the idea of fiction written by nuns."

Citing as an example an unpublished story, Sister Gilbert added:

"What I thought I was doing was making a kind of study of religious fanaticism. Nuns being people, it seems to be that fanaticism is present in a convent in the same proportion as outside. But if I put the story in a convent setting, besides being unacceptable to the authorities, it would help perpetuate a stereotype of nuns."

TV Show Honored For New Music

NEW YORK (UPI) — The NBC - TV Teachers Guide received a special award in the 1965 National Mass Media Brotherhood Awards program for publishing and bringing into the nation's classrooms songwriter Gladys Shelley's "Peace and Harmony."

The song, which offers a prayer for peace, brotherhood and understanding among the world's peoples, has been recorded by Hildegarde on the Spiral Record label. It was on the special recommended list of the Mass Media Division of the National Conference of Christians and Jews for use on radio and television during Brotherhood Week.

Cooks Have A Saint

NEW YORK (UPI) — The patron saint of cooks is St. Martha, says the Catholic Digest.

Guest Minister In Novato Pulpit

Dr. J. Hudson Ballard has selected "The Test of the Second Mile" as his sermon title for tomorrow when he will occupy the pulpit of the Novato Presbyterian Church for both the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services.

He is guest minister in the absence of the Rev. C. M. Croughan who is on vacation, having completed his summer courses at the San Francisco Theological Seminary. Reverend Croughan will return to the pulpit on Aug. 29.

Bible School Due To Start In Fairfax

Vacation Bible school for Fairfax Community Church will begin at 9:30 a.m. Monday, and conclude at noon Friday, with a picnic for young enrolees, parents and friends after worship services the following Sunday.

The classes will center on informing pupils about their Spanish and Mexican-descent neighbors in California. A small fee will be charged to defray craft class materials.

The picnic at noon Aug. 29 will be a potluck gathering in Deer Park.

Lucas Valley Cleric Home From Conclave

Rev. Dale Nystrom, pastor of Lucas Valley Community Church, has just returned from Green Lake, Wis., where he attended a weeklong extension conference of the American Baptist Assembly.

Under the theme, "Mission and Ministry in the midst of Change," the conferees discussed congregation and building program problems and methods.

Family Problems To Be Discussed

Sixth in the series of Outreach committee programs for the Tiburon Baptist Church will feature the director of casework for the Family Service Center of Marin, in the church at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Mrs. Shirley Gehrke will discuss, "The Family in Sickness and in Health" and will answer questions in open discussion following her talk.

Nursery care will be provided at the public meeting.

Church Plans Ads

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — A program of general advertising in Sunday newspapers will be launched by The American Lutheran Church this fall. Announced as a pilot project, the ALC's ad schedule will be carried in the pictorial sections of four Sunday editions of dailies which cover a five - state area in the upper midwest.

Turkey Digs Up Road To Uncover Church

ISTANBUL (UPI) — Archeologists are excavating the ruins of an important 1,400-year-old Byzantine church — right in the middle of one of Istanbul's busiest throughfares.

Although a nightmare for city motorists, the archeologists' "hole in the road" is expected to reveal important secrets about pre-Justinian Byzantine building.

Stone slabs bearing Greek inscriptions — unearthed by a bulldozer during road repairs five years ago — led to the discovery of the early 6th Century Church of St. Polyeuktos.

Named after one of the numerous Byzantine saints, the newly discovered church was built by the Byzantine Princess Anicia Juliana between 524 and 527 A.D. — eight years before Byzantine architecture reached its peak with the building of Justinian's famous St. Sophia Cathederal.

The ruins of the church of St. Polyeuktos are located beneath Ataturk Boulevard — a broad dual — carriageway which cuts across old Stamboul from the Golden Horn to Aksaray.

Excavations began in earnest this year, following preliminary soundings of the site in 1964.

A joint Turco-American operation, it is being financed by the Byzantine Research Institute of Dumbarton Oaks, Harvard, and the Istanbul Archeological Museum.

Already the outlines of the church are visible to the trained eye.

Finds on the site so far have included richly carved cornices, and columns inlaid with elaborate patterns of colored glass and amethyst.

"Further excavations are expected to throw important new light on the crucial period of Byzantine architectural and scuptural development which led up to the construction of St. Sophia," said British archeologist Martin Harrison, the joint director of the project.

Meanwhile, irrate motorists curse the secrets of history as they creep around the huge cater that once was a speedsters' paradise.

Church Sets Two Sunday Picnic Events

Two picnic outings have been planned for families and guests of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Marin for tomorrow and Aug. 29.

The family committee is sponsoring a "food forage" beginning at 10 a.m. tomorrow at the church. From there participants will find their own ways to the picnic site at Dillon Beach, pausing along the way to find seasonal, natural "and exceptional foods" at such places as a rural area cheese factory and orchards.

"The game is to see how well we eat," committee members explained.

August 29, church members will gather at the Bay Area-wide Friendship House picnic at the Speedway Meadows picnic grounds in Golden Gate Park, sharing potluck in an interracial gathering at 11 a.m.

Church Banquet To Illustrate 'Feast' Parable

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — An unusual banquet is planned for the triennial convention of The American Lutheran Church Brotherhood in Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 19-22. For every man attending the banquet there will be an extra table setting for a stranger to be brought in from the "highways and byways" of Ohio's capital city.

The idea for the "Feast of the Lord" event is taken from a parable of Jesus in which the "Kingdom of Heaven" is compared with a wedding feast to which invited guests failed to respond. Servants then were assigned to go onto the highways to bring in strangers.

Women Give Coins To Aid Missionaries

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — Assemblies of God Women's Missionary Council groups throughout the United States contributed more than $47,000 in pennies to 1964 missionary projects, according to headquarters office compilations.

Regional offices used coin collections to raise funds for home and foreign missionary activities. The penny collection was 25 per cent above 1963 coin giving.

Novato Boys Lose, But Now Try For State Title

By JIM GILMARTIN
I-J Sports Editor

PORTLAND — Novato's All-Stars, dealt a heart-breaking 3-0 defeat in 10 innings by South Mountain, Ariz. yesterday, fought for state of California honors today in the Little League Western Regional Baseball Tournament.

South Mountain broke up a tense pitching duel in the top of the 10th—the fourth extra inning — when third baseman Larry Sordia, hitless in four previous at-bats, slammed a three-run homer off relief pitcher Randy Foster.

South Mountain was to meet Klamath, Falls, Ore. this afternoon for the regional championship and the right to play in next week's World Series at Williamsport, Pa. Klamath Falls scored a 10-0 victory in last night's other semi-final game over Covina, Calif, the team Novato met today for third place. Winner will be California state champ.

Yesterday's opener was a classic pitching duel between curve-balling Steve Tieche of Novato and fast-baller Paul Gonzalez of the Arizona champions. Each went the maximum of nine innings before being replaced, as dictated by L. L. rules.

Tieche, working under probably the most pressure he's ever experienced in his 12 years on this earth, turned in his greatest performance, blanking the Arizonans for nine innings while giving three singles and striking out 14. Raw courage and a lot of stuff on the ball got him out of trouble in five consecutive innings—the second through sixth. Gonzalez was nicked for eight hits but was terrific under pressure, and benefitted immensely from a controversial decision by plate umpire Al Groupe that deprived Novato of a run in the third inning—and as things turned out it was the biggest play of the tournament. Here's how it happened: Third baseman Mark Greving, batting last in the order but providing the big stick of the day with three hits, beat out a bunt single with one out to ignite the spark. Foster, playing centerfield before his ill-fated relief stint, flew out to center, but second sacker John Kidder kept the rally alive with a sharp single to center. Then big Stan Ericksen drilled a single to right, sending Greving barreling for home with what could have been the winning run. But a perfect throw by right-fielder Gordon Gartner to catcher Frank Angulo caught Greving at the plate on a close play.

Many of the 4,000 spectators thought Greving was safe. particulary the rooting section of some 35 Novatans in attendance. Novato coach Gene Ferretti angrily charged, "He (Greving) was safe. He was definitely across the plate before the tag, but that just goes to show you that an umpire can beat you."

Manager Sheridan Moats agreed, saying one of Mark's feet touched the plate.

But umpire Groupe later there was no question in his mind that Greving was out. "He came in high and both feet missed the plate," the arbiter, one of six working this game, declared.

Moats refused to single out any one individual, saying his boys "were all great. They have nothing to be ashamed of." He later lauded Tieche for his great effort.

This 2 hour and 34 minute game, played on a rain soaked field under cloudy skies, had thrills galore.

Novato left 11 runners stranded and missed opportunities with runners in scoring position in the third, fourth, seventh, eighth and ninth innings.

South Mountain left nine stranded, including boys in scoring position in the second, third, fifth and sixth innings. Tieche grew stronger toward the end, retiring in order the last 11 batters to face him, six by strikeouts. Of his 14 whiffs, five were called third strikes, so befuddled were the Arizonans by his curve and sinker.

The 12½-year-old righthander was given a standing ovation

NO. 36 FOR MAYS—Willie Mays crosses the plate after blasting his 36th homer of the season in the third inning last night to help the Giants down the Dodgers 5-1. It was the 12th homer of August for Willie. He is being greeted at the plate by Willie McCovey (44) as Dodger catcher John Roseboro watches.

Braves Recapture N.L. Top Spot

By JIM HACKLEMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Eddie Mathews and Willie Mays, a pair of swinging captains, are leading the parade in the Month of the March for the Milwaukee Braves and San Francisco Giants.

Mathews hit a decisive two-run homer for Milwaukee last night in a 4-3 victory over Pittsburgh. Mays hit a decisive two-run homer for San Francisco in a 5-1 victory over Los Angeles.

Results: The Braves recaptured first place in the National League, one-half game over the Dodgers, with the Giants just one-half game further back in third.

Mathews and Mays, team captains in their 14th NL season, have been on August tears. The Milwaukee slugger has belted seven homers, driven in 25 runs and improved his batting average 20 points to .258 for the Braves, who started the month in fourth place, four games out.

Mays has hit 12 August homers, boosting his major league-leading total to 36, batted across 19 runs and increased his average 12 points to .320. The Giants started the month 2½ games out of first.

Elsewhere in the NL—Cincinnati's fourth-place Reds climbed to within three games of the top, edging Philadelphia 3-2 on third-string catcher Jim Coker's homer in the 10th inning. Bob Gibson pitched St. Louis to an 8-1 romp over the New York Mets. And Houston and the Chicago Cubs split a doubleheader, the Astros winning the opener 7-4 before the Cubs took the second game 2-0.

Mathews' 28th homer came after a single by Hank Aaron in the eighth inning at Pittsburgh, cracking a 2-2 tie. Joe Torre also homered in support of Wade Blasingame, now 15-8, after pitching a six-hitter. The young lefty held the Pirates hitless until the sixth, when Manny Mota singled and Roberto Clemente homered.

Sammy Ellis went the full 10 innings for the Reds against the Phils as Coker and Don Pavletich, another reserve catcher, supplied the offensive punch. Pavletich drove in the first Cincinnati run in the opening inning with the first of his three hits, then tripled in the eighth and scored on Coker's sacrifice fly.

That made it 2-1, but Johnny Briggs tied it with a leadoff homer in the last of the ninth. Coker's winning homer in the 10th came off reliever Gary Wagner.

Gibson was overpowering in running his lifetime record against the Mets to 11-2. The big right-hander gave up three hits, struck out 11 and put down the last 18 batters in order after Charlie Smith's homer in the fourth inning. St. Louis got off to three runs in the first and added five in the fifth, all off Al Jackson, now 6-17. Gibson is 15-9.

Ken Boyer rapped a homer and triple for the Cards, knocking in three runs, while Lou Brock singled three times and stole his 50th base. The Mets, losing for the 15th time in their last 17 games, committed four errors.

Bob Aspromonte's bases-loaded single was the winning hit in Houston's ninth-inning rally in the doubleheader opener against the Cubs. Lee Maye started the uprising against hard-working reliever Ted Abernathy with his fourth hit of the game. Bill Faul won the second game for Chicago with an eight-hitter for his third victory—all shutouts.

Don Hawken Wins Norcal Junior Golf Championship

Now that he has the Northern California Junior Golf Championship safely tucked away, Don Hawken of San Rafael is looking ahead to a shot at the Northern California Amateur title next week.

Hawken, 15-year-old golfer from Peacock Gap Country Club, breezed to an easy victory over Steve Mountain of Millbrae yesterday in the 36-hole finals of the Norcal junior tourney played at the Presidio golf course in San Francisco.

Final score was 9 and 8.

Hawken fired a 76 in the morning round on his way to a lead of 4 up after the first 18 holes of play. The second round got only as far as the 10th green when the Marin youngster locked it up.

Hawken, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald I. Hawken of 15 Dellwood Court, started to pull away late in the morning round. Mountain won the fourth and 12th holes, slicing the margin to one stroke, but then Hawken started running away. Don won the 13th with a birdie, the 14th with a par, and the 16th with a par.

Because of several concessions during the match, no official medal scores were known, but Hawken fired an approximate 40-36 in the morning round and was four over par in the afternoon round. On the other end of the scale, Mountain had an 80 in the first round and was nine over par in the second round.

The BULLPEN

With JOHN J. CONNOLLY

Warren Spahn Has Shown He's Only Good For First 5 Innings

CONNOLLY

Warren Spahn, San Francisco Giant veteran lefthanded pitcher, proud and determined, can bundle up his playing gear and say to himself and anyone else:

"Ole man, you've had it."

That isn't said with any idea of discouraging Spahn, but if he hasn't convinced the Giants and himself that he is a FIVE INNING PITCHER, then he'd better look at the record and recent boxscores of his last 3 games.

Why Manager Herman Franks allows Spahn to continue after five innings is puzzling. In three starts Spahnie has proved to everyone he can pitch at top speed against the best of 'em in the National League. And he's good, effective, has nice control and throws good breaking stuff. But after five innings he's a dud. His curve shrinks to the size of a pretzel and his fast ball looks like an ordinary change of pace.

SO WHY DO the Giants allow him to go on? Do they want the last ounce of blood out of his body before calling the rescue squad?

Spahn, when the Giants picked him up for $1, was intended to be a "fill in" pitcher. Now that he has joined them, the Giants are making him a regular starter, at apprentice wages, too. It ain't right. And it ain't second guessing either. It is just common ordinary horse sense to realize that a guy 44 years old, with a magnificent record behind him, can't be expected to pitch a full game in the heat of a torrid flag race.

Who does Franks have on the Giant pitching staff, outside of Juan Marichal and Bob Shaw, who can go the route? I dunno. And neither does Franks.

TO SAY SPAHN has been a disappointment to the Giants would be a falsehood.

To say he can help them, any longer than 5 innings, is likewise a fib.

So let Franks use his own noodle. Pitch Spahn in his regular starting turn for five innings and let the younger, stronger and sometimes lucky bullpen, pick him up from there. If the bullpen can do as good in the last four innings as Spahn does in the first five innings, the Giants will be way ahead at the finish of the season and maybe Spahn won't be sold for another $1.

EVERYBODY IS wondering what Tito Fuentes, the new Giant shortstop, is doing moving Dick Schofield and Jimmy Davenport out of the regular lineup. You won't find out from the Giants, but if you ask those who know, they'll tell you Schofield and Davenport both have bad legs and can't stand the gaff.

Fuentes, rugged but inexperienced, with a great throwing arm and more speed of hoof than either Schofield or Davenport, and apparently a better hitter, looks like a mortal cinch to be kept in the lineup.

But what does the shifting of top minor leaguers into a hot pennant scramble mean? It simply says the league is slipping so fast and losing so much of its glamor that any good minor leaguer is as good, if not better, than established big leaguers.

All you have to do to verify these statements is to check the lineups of the 10 various National League clubs. And you'll find the names of glorified minor leaguers heading the list.

CAN A RUNNING ball club be more effective than a hitting aggregation?

The Giants have home run hitters galore but the Dodgers seem to have guys who like to wait out pitches and get on base via the walk route.

In checking over the Dodger statistics we find the L.A. club so far this year has had 339 players who got on base via a walk. Add to this 44 more who were intentionally passed and you get some idea of how often this gang from riotland get on base.

In spite of all the walks issued to the Dodgers they haven't a single regular hitting better than .288.

Ron Fairly walked 55 times; Maury Wills 22; Jim Gilliam 37; Wes Parker 57; Jim Lefebvre 60; John Roseboro 27 and yet the whole crew are away below their hitting potential.

No wonder they say a running ball club has a better chance for the rag than a home run hitting outfit—like the Giants.

WHAT A MONTH!

Mays Is Booming

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Because baseball remains a game of momentum, the most the San Francisco Giants can hope for in the tight National League race is for Willie Mays to keep moving.

After hitting his 12th homer for August last night, Mays had 11 games left before September to take a shot at the record for most homers in a month.

Mays' fourth homer in as many games not only kept him in front of the major league race with 36, but started the Giants rolling to a 5-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The record for most homers in a month is held by Rudy York, who blasted 18 in August for the 1937 Detroit Tigers. In September of 1949, Ralph Kiner set the National League record with 16 for Pittsburgh.

The Giants never looked back after Mays lofted a Howie Reed slider into the jet stream in the third inning with a man on base and the score tied 1-1.

"I wasn't trying to hit it there," said Mays afterward. "I am just swinging the bat."

Right-hander Bob Shaw survived some embarrassing moments in the second inning and posted his seventh straight victory in a 14-6 season.

Shaw threw a five-hitter at the Dodgers, dropping Los Angeles from first to second, one-half game behind the Milwaukee Braves. The Giants finished the evening one game behind in third place.

Three of the five singles off Shaw never left the infield, including second-inning hits by Ron Fairly and Lou Johnson. Shaw walked Wes Parker and Reed, forcing in the run.

"I thought we'd get to him then," said Dodger manager Walt Alston.

Reed had struck out in all eight of his official appearances this season, although it was his third walk.

"The wind bothered me and made me lose my power of concentration," said Shaw. "But I want to emphasize I'm not making any excuses."

"All I can do at times like that is take a deep breath and say to myself, 'You're not going to do anything if you get excited.' "

The Dodgers never got another man past first base as Shaw beat them for the first time since May 2, 1962, when he was a reliever for Milwaukee.

Jim Hart chased Reed by hitting a two-strike knuckleball over the left field fence leading off the sixth inning for the Giants' last run. Hart had doubled across Willie McCovey in the second on a hit-and-run play.

Shaw squeezed home Len Gabrielson in the fourth on a two-strike pitch with a sacrifice bunt that brought a roar of approval from the crowd of 41,858, largest at Candlestick Park this year.

Memories of 1962 appeared before the game when the Dodgers discovered a pile of extra dirt around home plate. Maury Wills scraped the pile away with a board.

"It would slow balls hit to the infield off Shaw's sinkers and would slow our runners because they would have to run through it on the way to first," said Alston.

In 1962, the Giants were accused of watering down the first base area to slow down Wills and the other Dodger base stealers.

Bob Bolin (7-4) took the mound for the Giants today against southpaw Claude Osteen (11-11).

Souchak Takes Lead In Carling Tourney

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — A veteran pro who went back to school and an unknown judo exponent from Japan shared the attention today in the $200,000 Carling World Golf Championship.

Mike Souchak held a one-stroke lead entering the second round after posting a 32-36—68 over the par 71 Pleasant Valley Country Club course yesterday.

The 38-year-old Souchak, who hasn't won a tournament in a year, said he paid a recent visit to his old boss, Claude Harmon, at Winged Foot Country Club at Mamaroneck, N.Y.

'I worked with him for five hours a day for four days and came away with some good ideas," he said. "Now the smoke has cleared away and my game has gotten better each day."

Japan Open champion Hideyo Sugimoto was one of six players one stroke behind Souchak.

The group also included Arnold Palmer, Miller Barber, Joe Campbell and Dick Hart.

Sugimoto is a touring pro in Japan who played in three previous tourneys in the United States, including the St. Paul Open, the first in which he made the cutoff.

The jovial 180-pounder earned an invitation here because of his point performances in the Malayan and Thailand tournaments.

The 27-year-old Sugimoto said his biggest prize in a single meet was the $2,000 he won in the Japan Open. Asked through an interpreter what he would do if he won the $35,000 first prize here, he said:

"Give up playing and go back to Japan."

Sugimoto has won two black belts in judo competition.

Souchak said he chipped exceptionally well, adding "I rescued three pairs with chips to within a foot of the cup."

On the 18th, he sliced into an adjacent fairway and caught a trap coming back. However, his chip bounced over the cup leaving him with an 18-inch putt.

Jack Nicklaus bent a four-iron Friday when it hit a tree and had mud hole trouble on the 17th fairway as he staggered to a 74.

"I hit a good shot off the tee," he said, "but that was the last one."

U. S. Open champion Gary Player of South Africa gained a stroke by having the first round washed out Thursday. Player was one over Thursday, but finished with a par 71 the second time around.

British Open champion Peter Thomson had a 77 and Dave Marr, last week's PGA winner, had a 73.

Fast Times For Marin Cyclists

Jim Nicholson of San Francisco recorded the fastest time Thursday in the Marin Cyclists' final time trials over a 10-mile course on Paradise Drive in Corte Madera. He covered it in 24:38 to beat Vince Mulligan of San Rafael (25:14) and Bill Kenyon of Vallejo (25:55) in the senior division.

Jeff Ekhardt of Larkspur won the junior division in 26.23, barely edging Steve Ginn of Bakersfield, who came in after 26:32. Laramie Moreau of San Anselmo was third in 27:50.

The Veterans' Division went to Grant Kasson of San Rafael (27:31), followed by Ken Potter of Corte Madera (29:10).

Another World Mark For Young Swimmer

CARDIFF, Wales (AP) — The United States' all-conquering teen-age swimmers got off to a whopping 82-48 lead over Britain yesterday as Patty Caretto broke a world record and at least six American records went by the boards.

They figure to get better.

"Our kids are still tired after that long trip from New York," team manager Dr. John Bogert said after the opening day of the U.S.-British meet.

"But we are terribly proud of Patty and we should rearrange the record books a little more today."

Patty, a 14-year-old junior high school student from Whittier, Calif., turned in a fantastic performance, in her 18:51.1 record in the 1,650 yard freestyle.

Not only did she take more than 20 seconds off the pending record, but she did it alone, swimming without competition in a special event that did not count in the point standings.

It was the second world record in less than two weeks for the little blue-eyed blonde and increased her stature as the world's best female long distance swimmer. She broke her own world 1,500 meter mark with a time of 18:23.7 in the AAU national championships in Toledo a week ago.

"I've been looking forward to this one for two years," Patty said after her 1,650 yard victory.

John Nelson, a 17-year-old from Pompano Beach, Fla., set an American record for the 220-yard men's freestyle with a time of 2:01 flat, and helped on a relay that set another national mark of 8:15 for the 880 yard relay.

Claudia Kolb, Santa Clara, Calif., also had a hand in two U.S. records, 2:56.5 in the 220-yard breast stroke and on a women's 440-yard medley relay that finished in 4:42.2.

Other records were by Judy Humbarger, Fort Wayne, Ind., 2:31.2 in the women's 220-yard backstroke; Martha Randall, Wayne, Pa., 2:13.5 in the women's 220-yard freestyle, and Kendis Moore, Phoenix, Ariz., 2:32.9 in the women's 220-yard butterfly.

49ers Vs. Dallas In Portland

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Coaches Jack Christiansen of the San Francisco 49ers and Tom Landry of the Dallas Cowboys believe their National Football League teams are shaping up well.

Better than the 49ers 37-21 loss to the Cleveland Browns and the Cowboys' 9-0 defeat by the Los Angeles Rams in the teams' only games to date.

The teams will be out to prove it when they meet in Multnomah Stadium tonight. The Cowboys are slight favorites, if only because of a 34-23 victory over San Francisco here last year.

"The score against Cleveland may not have indicated it," Christiansen said, "but we have made progress. We are not going to be a bad football team."

Larry Karl, Dallas publicity man, said the team had three good touchdown drives under way against Los Angeles only to have a mistake kill each one.

"If the offensive line, with new faces in four of the five spots from tackle to tackle, comes through, we'll be in good shape," he said.

Veteran John Brodie, who starred in the stadium for Stanford teams a decade ago, will start at quarterback for San Francisco although he recently has been troubled by a sore back. His understudy is George Mira from Miami University in Florida, who played against Cleveland.

The starting quarterback for Dallas will be passing ace Don Meredith. Jerry Rhome, Tulsa University star last year, will spell him.

Mostly fair weather with possible occasional showers is forecast for the game.

Merchants Host Hatzel

The Mill Valley Merchants host the Hatzel Radio nine from El Cerrito tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. at Optimist Field.

It will be the first Bay Area Invitational Semi-Pro Baseball League meeting between the two teams. Their first scheduled game was postponed to Sept. 19 when umpires didn't show up. Mill Valley has a 3-3 league record so far.

Frank Burch will start for the Merchants tomorrow. He has whiffed 42 batters in the last three games, pitching 24 innings. Starting batting order for the Mill Valley team:

Ed Sabica, cf; Joe Hebel, rf; Bill Clark, 1b; Bill Brody, 3b; Terry Jarcik, ss; Mike Wyman, lf; Fred Mack, c; Frank Ubhaus, 2b; Frank Burch, p.

PRO FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

Hayes Gets A Chance To Make Good

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Olympian Bob Hayes continues his quest for a professional football career tonight, attempting to make his mark where so many of his predecessors as the world's fastest human have tried and been found lacking.

Hayes, winner of two Olympic gold medals and holder of the world record 9.1 for the 100 yard dash, is scheduled to work at flanker for the Dallas Cowboys in their exhibition against San Francisco at Portland, Ore.

Hayes, a 190 pounder, is seeking to make it where such other reknown sprinters as Dave Sime and Frank Budd failed. Many think he has the best chance of them all.

"He's primarily a football player," said Hayes' college coach, Jake Gaither of Florida A&M. "He's a football player who just happens to be fast enough to run the 100 in 9.1."

The Cowboy-49er game is one of five on Saturday's crowded pro football exhibition slate. The long weekend, in which 20 of the 22 major league teams see action, got started last night with Tommy Mason leading the Minnesota Vikings over the Philadelphia Eagles 35-21 and the Baltimore Colts beating the Detroit Lions 23-3.

Mason scored twice on runs and passed for a third touchdown on a halfback-option. The 15-yard toss to Tom Hall in the fourth period broke a 21-21 tie. Claude Crabb got the first Eagle touchdown, racing 97 yards after intercepting a pass from Ron VanderKelen, and Tim Brown scored the other two on a three-yard run and a 51-yard screen pass play.

Jerry Hill had two Baltimore touchdowns, both in the second quarter, on a short run and on a six-yard pass from Gary Cuozzo. The Lions mounted only two threats and cashed in on only one, with a 22-yard field goal by Wayne Walker in the opening minutes.

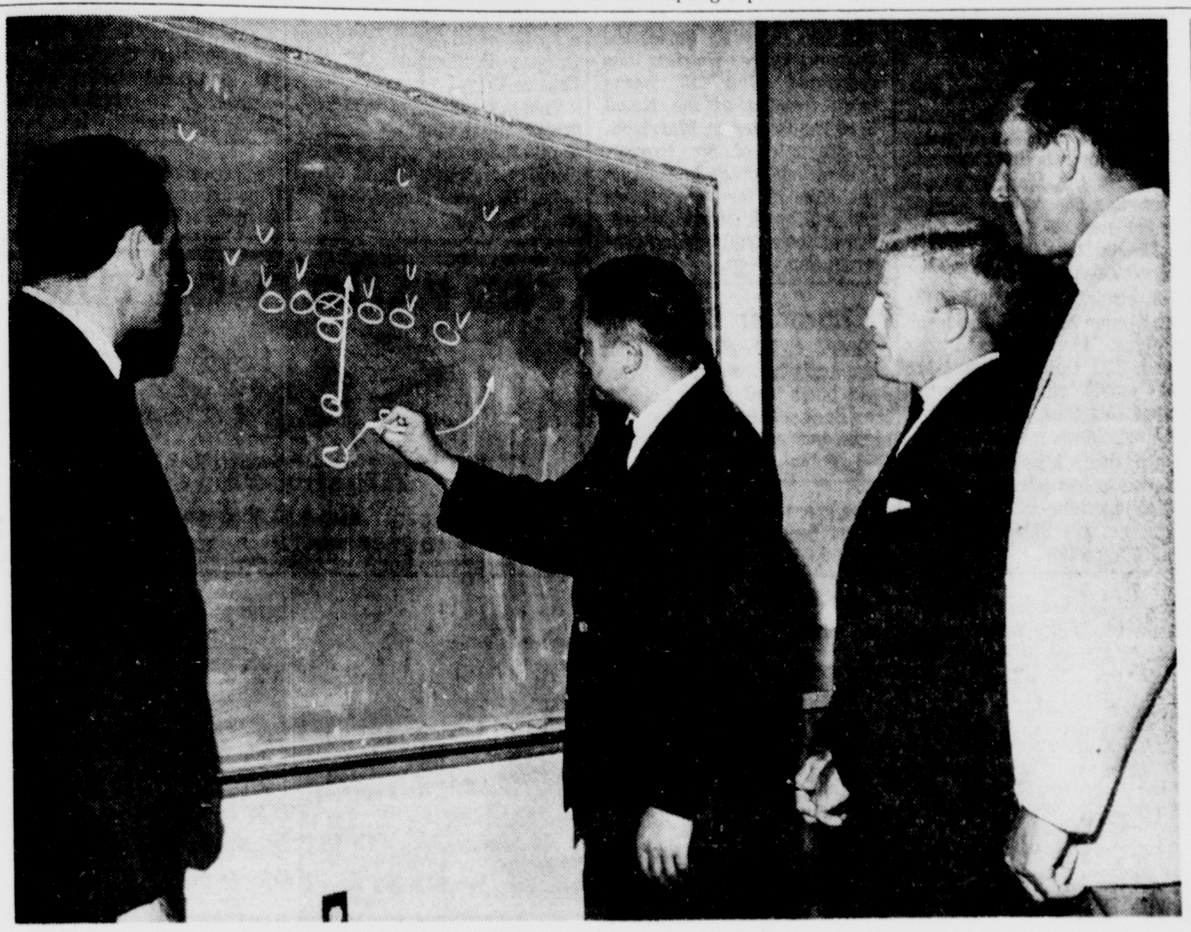

Two games were scheduled this afternoon, New York vs. Buffalo at New Brunswick, N.J., in the American League, and Chicago and Green Bay at Milwaukee in the National League.

In addition to Dallas-San Francisco, tonight's NFL slate had St. Louis vs. Washington at Richmond, Va., while the AFL offered Boston at Houston and San Diego at Denver.

Tomorrow's schedule has Cleveland at Los Angeles and New York vs. Pittsburgh in New Haven, Conn., in the NFL and Kansas City at Oakland in the AFL.

Each league has two games set for television coverage. NBC showed the Jets-Bills, with New York blacked out, and will have Sunday's Chiefs-Raiders game. CBS televised the Bears-Packers live and will tape the Cowboys-49ers for a Sunday showing.

Hayes played only the last two minutes in the Cowboys' 9-0 loss to Los Angeles Tuesday, but caught two passes for 13 yards and probably will get much more action against the

CAN WE COUNT ON THAT, COACH?

Coach Pete Limm of Terra Linda and the North Marin All-Stars (check the chalk) is a generous fellow who would give you the shirt off his back; but if you're an opposing coach, don't wear it—it will probably have itching powder in it. Wise South mentors Bob Franceschini of Drake (far left) and Al Endriss of Redwood (far right) brought their own shirts when Limm and his partner with the North, Marlin Olsen of Novato, offered to diagram a few plays they might use Thursday night at the College of Marin gridiron.

Sanford Wins In His A.L. Debut

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jack Sanford's surprise is the Minnesota Twins' displeasure.

Sanford, making his American League debut after nine years as a National Leaguer, set down the first-place Twins on one run in six innings last night, and the Los Angeles Angels held on for a 3-1 victory in the first game of a doubleheader.

Minnesota came back for a 3-1 triumph in the nightcap.

The Angels purchased the 36-year-old veteran from the San Francisco Giants only four days ago, a move that Sanford said surprised him.

"I thought I had pitched pretty well for them," he commented after beating the Twins in the opener.

Sanford started 16 games for the Giants in attempting a comeback after missing about half of the 1964 season with a damaged pitching arm that required surgery. He won four, lost five and compiled a 3.96 earned run average before San Francisco decided he was expendable.

Against the Twins, the right-hander allowed only two runners to reach third base before Tony Oliva led off the sixth with a single and raced home as Jimmie Hall doubled. Sanford retired the next three batters but gave way to Bob Lee in the seventh.

"I got a little tired in the sixth inning and wasn't getting the ball where I wanted it," said Sanford, who was making his first start since Aug. 1. "The pitch Hall hit for the double was toward the outside of the plate. I was trying to throw it inside to him."

Sanford, a 24-game winner in 1962, feels no ill effects from his operation, adding:

"I feel like I'm throwing as hard as I did two or three years ago."

The twins felt it too.

In other American League games Chicago trimmed Kansas City 3-1, Detroit swept Boston 2-0 and 3-2, New York edged Baltimore 1-0 and Washington nipped Cleveland 3-2.

Raiders To Host Chiefs

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Oakland's quarterback crew will be intact for the first time this season tomorrow when the Raiders clash in an American Football League exhibition against Kansas City at Frank Youell Field.

Both go into the game with 1-1 records. Paradoxically, the Raiders have defeated San Diego and lost to Denver. Kansas City beat Denver and lost to San Diego.

Cotton Davidson and Tom Flores, the quarterbacks who shouldered the load for the Raiders last season are both scheduled to play.

Davidson returned to practice just this week after suffering an arm injury in early training. Flores has had just one quarter of action. He was plagued with a heavy cold early and then suffered a head injury.

With those two out, Dick Wood and Lee Grosscup handled the signal calling.

Pete Beathard, familiar in this area as a Southern California quarterback, draws the starting assignment for the Chiefs who also boast a top AFL defensive unit.

Veteran linebackers E. J. Holub, Sherrill Headrick and Bobby Bell head the defensive unit.

With Beathard in the offensive backfield are Curtis McClinton, Mack Lee Hill and Frank Jackson. Former Stanford star Chris Burford plays the split end.

Defensive halfback Fred Williamson makes his first return to Youell Field since being traded to the Chiefs last winter for Dave Grayson. Williamson began his AFL career with Oakland in 1962 and won all-league honors.

Flores will open at quarterback for the Raiders in a backfield having Clem Daniels at halfback, Alan Miller at fullback and Bo Roberson at flanker. Art Powell starts as usual at spread end.

Hardtops Roll At Petaluma

Many new cars are expected to be driven at the Petaluma Fairgrounds tonight as the unsuccessful drivers attempt to find a better machine for next summer. Meanwhile, Tom Abreu of Castro Valley will try to protect his 21-point lead over Win Beaver of Santa Rosa for season honors.

Jack Dempsey of San Rafael and John Soars Jr. of Oakland should be in contention tonight when qualifying starts at 7 o'clock. The first race is at 8:15.

INTRODUCING THE MARIN ALL-STARS

Introducing members of the North-South Marin All-Star football squads that clash Thursday night, Aug. 26, at Kentfield in a game sponsored by the Ross Valley Kiwanis Club:

THE NORTH

TIM GARVIN was one of the reasons Terra Linda had such a good running game last year.

A speedy halfback, the 5-10, 170-pound Garvin wound up the league season with a 7.3 ball-toting average, gaining 241 yards in only 33 carries. Terra Linda also had a sharp passing attack, second best in the league. And again it was Garvin, the team's leading receiver—and No. 2 in the league, who helped make the passing attack go. He caught 14 passes for 281 yards. He also was the second high scorer in the league with seven touchdowns and one conversion.

It was no wonder he was named all-league after last year's performance. He also played basketball and was on the track team his freshman and sophomore years. His future plans call for two years at College of Marin.

BOB RAMSEY was a 5-8, 160-pound guard for the San Rafael High School Bulldogs during the 1963 and '64 seasons.

In addition to his two years of varsity football, Bob was on the school's golf team two years and played baseball for two seasons. He was a member of the Student Congress at San Rafael and was vice president of the junior class. He was also a member of the Sportsmen's Club.

He plans to go to Brown University next month to start a pre-med education.

DAVE HAMMOND played a year of varsity football at Petaluma High before transferring to San Rafael where he played varsity his senior year.

A 5-11, 161-pound back, he also played baseball at San Rafael High. Hammond is a replacement on the North team for Gary Palmateer, an end from San Rafael High who moved to Alaska after his graduation last year.

He plans to attend College of Marin and eventually the University of Missouri to study law.

THE SOUTH

BOB BARNECUT is another Drake all-leaguer, being named by the league coaches as an offensive guard on the 1964 dream team.

He is 6-2 and weighs 190 pounds and displayed great blocking ability throughout the season for the Pirates. He also participated on the Drake track team and was head of boys self government at the school. He is also active in YMCA work.

His future plans are undecided.

STEVE CARRINO of Marin Catholic received honorable mention all-league last season as one of the better linebackers in the county.

Used strictly on defense, the 6-foot, 160-pound linebacker won the outstanding team player award for the Wildcats. He was first string both his junior and senior years.

He will be entering College of Marin this fall.

Monday Is Deadline For Dipsea

Entries are pouring into the Mill Valley Junior Chamber of Commerce for the 55th Dipsea Race Aug. 29, but time is running out. No entries will be accepted after Monday, Jaycee president Bob Gaskill said yesterday.

Over 100 have been turned in so far. Gaskill says he suspects that another 30-40 are in the mail. The address for entries, which may be obtained from race chairman Bob Bass or co-chairman Bob Fahrner, is Post Office Box 30, Mill Valley.

One entry which has been received came from Greg Sparks, who last year at the age of 17 won the race in his first try with a handicap time of 41:19. His handicap was 11 minutes, as he led the Marin Athletic Club to its sixth straight team victory.

Novato Li'l Leaguers Going For State Title

when he was removed from the game at the end of the ninth inning. He pitched his strong little heart out.

Foster got the first batter out in the 10th, but then his control betrayed him as he walked the next batter and then hit the next boy with a pitch, setting the stage for Sordia's line drive homer over the right field fence —209 feet away.

"Randy threw a fast curve ball but it was too high," said Ferretti.

Besides the third inning, Novato's other threats were in the fourth, seventh, eighth and ninth innings. In the fourth, catcher Jock Burnam beat out a bunt and right fielder Clint Hubbard singled infield with two men on, none out. Gonzalez then fanned shortstop Phil Adams and outfielder Tom Nelson, but an error by Gonzales on a bouncer back to the hill by Tieche loaded the bags. The threat died when Greving tapped the ball just in front of the plate and catcher Angulo picked it up to record a force-out.

In the sixth, with one out, Tieche walked and Greving singled infield. But the latter was doubled off first base by Arizona centerfielder Gary Thude who made a long run for a good catch of a fly ball by Foster and rifled the ball back to first for the double play. Greving apparently thought Foster's ball dropped in for a base hit, for he was almost all the way to second base.

In the eighth inning with two out Burnam worked Gonzalez for his first walk of the game and pinch-hitter Jeff De Recat, batting for Hubbard, also walked. But Adams grounded out to third to end this threat.

The ninth inning, with two out, was when Greving tripled, the ball bouncing over the right-fielder's head when he slipped on the mushy turf and fell. But Mark died on third when Foster grounded out to third.

After South Mountain did its damage in the top of the 10th, Novato had a little spark left when Kidder led off with a single. He was forced at second, however, when Ericksen was safe on a fielder's choice. Burnam then went down swinging and Dave Judnick was called out on strikes—meaning the end of the line for Novato.

Outstanding defensive plays were turned in by third sacker Greving and Tom Nelson who made a long run for a fine catch in the ninth inning.

Each team committed only one error. Tieche was called twice on balks, the second one coming in the fifth inning when he slid on the muddy mound and fell down. This moved a runner to second, but the gutty little Novato pitcher came back to strike out .417 hitter Gene Clarke and get Sordia to pop out to second.

The field was so wet that most grounders didn't go very far. One of South Mountain's four hits and five of Novato's nine were of the infield variety.

Although they were visibly shaken by their tough loss immediately after the game, the Novato players quickly rebounded and congratulated the Arizonans. The North Marin boys then watched the other semi-final game, joking and laughing. Heart-break is a very temporary emotion at that age of life.

Builders In Home Game

The second-place Billings-Hutchison Builders continue their chase of the Santa Rosa Elks, currently leading the Bay Area Invitational Semi-pro Baseball League by 2½ games, when they host the Gino Benedetti nine of San Francisco at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow at Albert Field.

The Builders (4-3) downed the Benedetti club 6-1 in their first meeting. They have two games yet to play with the Elks, who are 6-0. Even if the Builders win all their remaining five games, including a pair over the leaders, the Elks must lose one other game to drop to a tie with B-H for the lead.

Ernie Evans or Dick Descalso will pitch Sunday for B-H, according to manager Joe Anselmo.

Santa Rosa Gal Shines In Net Play

Candy Douglas of Santa Rosa won the Girls 14 division and was runner-up in Girls 16 to highlight action yesterday in the Marin County Junior Hardcourts championships at the Mill Valley Tennis Club.

Candy blanked Cathy Lorain 6-0, 6-0 in the Girls 14 finals yesterday. Other final winners were Bonnie McBride in the Girls 12, Tina Lyman in Girls 16, and Chip Fisher in Boys 12.

State Lawmakers Expenses Tallied

By EDWIN S. CAPPS

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — California's part-time legislators drew an average of $11,241 during 1964 for salary, living expenses, per diem expenses for attending committee meetings, and travel allowances.

The bulk of the travel allowances was in addition to leased cars which are furnished most members—up to $150 per month for the lease, plus gas, oil and services charged to the state.

The "draw" of the legislators, including all features, ranged from a low of $8,257, drawn by Sen. Hugh P. Donnelly, D-Turlock, to a high of $17,605, drawn by Assemblyman Frank P. Belotti, R-Eureka.

The 78 members of the assembly (there were two vacancies during most of the year due to members being elected to other offices) apparently spent more time on legislative business, as they averaged drawing $11,815, as against the average of $10,093 drawn by the senators.

Legislators receive $6,000 a year in salary. They are paid $21 per day in living expenses while attending sessions in Sacramento. During 1964, when there was a budget session and special session, but no regular session, they were in session 92 days. Those who were in attendance each day received $1,932 in living expenses.

In addition, lawmakers are paid $25 per day for attendance at committee meetings between sessions. They receive 15 cents per mile for all travel, other than that made in the leased cars.

Curiously, the average expenses of assemblymen during 1964 were higher than they were during previous years when there were no leased cars.

The high man in the entire legislature was Assemblyman Belotti. However, Belotti does not have a leased car so the $8,281 mileage claimed by him was for actual travel that he paid for himself. In addition to paying his own travel expenses, Belotti lives in a large district far away from Sacramento and was chairman of a subcommittee on livestock and dairies.

In the senate, the high man was Sen. Randolph Collier, whose total amounted to $17,233. He has a state leased car. The $8,096 in travel expenses claimed by the senator was over and above expenses of the leased car.

Collier has a large district—Del Norte and Siskiyou counties—and is chairman of the senate committee on transportation which holds numerous hearings throughout the state. In addition, Collier is a member of a number of national legislative committees on transportation which require his presence at meetings throughout the nation.

The other top members of the assembly, as far as total draw was concerned were Assemblymen Jack T. Casey, D-Bakersfield, $17,407; James L. Holmes, R-Santa Barbara, defeated in November, 1964, $17,359; John C. Williamson, D-Bakersfield, $15,875; and Jerome R. Waldie, D-Antioch, $15,609. Waldie is Democratic floor leader and a member of the rules committee which must meet often in Sacramento. None of the four had state leased cars.

Other high-drawing senators included Senators Edwin J. Regan, D-Weaverville, since appointed to the appellate court, $12,822; Hugh M. Burns, D-Frenso president pro tempore of the senate, $12,205; Fred S. Farr, D-Carmel, $11,370; and $11,370; and Albert S. Rodda, D-Sacramento, $10,977. Regan and Farr were committee chairmen and Burns served as chairman of the senate rules committee.

Holmes was the "meetingest" assemblyman, claiming $1,715 in per diems, for more than 68 days of attending meetings. In the senate, Regan claimed per diems for $1,600, or 64 days.

Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh, D-Inglewood, probably one of the busiest men in the legislature, drew only $10,302, ranking him 63rd in the assembly in terms of money drawn. Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, dean of the assembly in terms of service, was the low man in that house, drawing only $8,452.

Assemblyman Charles E. Chapel, R-Palos Verdes Estates, and Gordon H. Winton, Jr., D-Merced, both drew $8,938.

Lowest men in the senate, in addition to Donnelly, were Senators John C. Begovich, D-Jackson, $8,393, and Luther E. Gibson, D-Vallejo, $8,751.

Marine Recruiters Face Brother-Sister Signup

When Dale Lewin, 17, of San Anselmo, was sworn into the Marines this week, his sister came along for the ceremony.

That might not be so unusual, were it not for the fact that Lynn Lewin, 18, was sworn in, also.

The brother and sister both decided at different times, and for different reasons, to join the Marines, according to their father, advertising salesman Edwin Lewin.

But when they both decided the time was ripe, they walked into the Vallejo recruiting office together and startled the recruiters by explaining what they planned to do.

Lynn, explained her father, has been thinking about it for five years, whereas Dale decided recently he would join. Lynn said she wanted to be a Woman Marine to "do something different, something exciting, to see the world and serve my country at the same time."

Dale, said his father, was impressed that "when someone comes back from some other branch, he says he was in the service; but when he gets out of the Marine Corps, he says, 'I was a Marine'."

Both Lewins went to Sir Francis Drake High School. Lynn, however, was graduated in June from a high school in Los Angeles.

Dale left within hours after Monday's swearing-in ceremony, and has already begun 16 weeks of boot camp. The first 12 weeks will be at the Marine Recruit Depot, San Diego, with the last four at nearby Camp Pendleton. He is then slated to join a Marine Aviation wing.

His sister must wait for the next Woman Marine basic training class to start at Parris Island, S. C. Only 10 classes are held yearly since the entire Women Marines contains only 1,600 members.

Until then, Miss Lewin will continue at her job as an information operator in the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.'s San Rafael office.

Fund Set Up For Needy Children

Pacific Day School, a Mill Valley ungraded school for children aged from three-and-a-half years to eight, has launched a fund-raising program for scholarships for underprivileged children.

Co-directors Jean Raible and Margaret A. Kelly say the goal this year is $9,000 which will enable them to place 13 children—about 35 per cent of the total enrollment—in the school.

A charitable non-profit corporation, Pacific Day School is at 40 Shell Road.

WAVE GRADUATE — Glenna Kay Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fay E. Stone, 206 Cascade Drive, Fairfax, has graduated after 10 weeks basic training at the Naval Training Center in Maryland. A graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School, Miss Stone has enlisted for three years and will work in administration at the naval training center in San Diego.

Character Badman

DALY CITY (AP) — A young gunman with a false beard dyed black and silver held up the Budget Market here last night and escaped with about $300, police said.

The grass family is one of the biggest families of plants, with nearly 5,000 different species.

Novato Police, Merchants Fight Bad Check Increase

Bad checks are on the increase in Novato and the Novato Police Department and Chamber of Commerce have teamed up to make war on them.

Sgt. Otto Haiungs of the Novato Police Department, has started issuing a bulletin every two weeks on bad checks through the Chamber of Commerce. The first one was issued on Aug. 1, and the second one last week.

The bulletins contained information which might help the businessmen stop the flow of bad checks and avoid being victimized.

For example, stolen payroll checks and numbers of those which might come into the area have been listed so that merchants can be on the lookout. Also listed are travelers checks which have been stolen.

Four Novato Men Join Navy

Four Novato men have enlisted in the U.S. Navy and two others have completed their initial training, the recruiting station at 1116 Fourth Street, San Rafael reports this week.

Those enlisted are: Richard T. Born, 20, of 2150 Vineyard Road; Robert G. Brunt, 18, of Pico Vista; Michael A. Patterson, 18, of 37 Baca Vista and Gregory P. Sherman, 18, of 4 Estates Drive.

Robert D. Heibel of 1420 Cambridge and Kenneth S. Ross II of 1118 Ruhlman Lane have completed recruit training at Great Lake, Ill., and are at present on home leave.

Three-quarters of all vacation trips are made during July and August.

It's time to unwind at Oakmont–

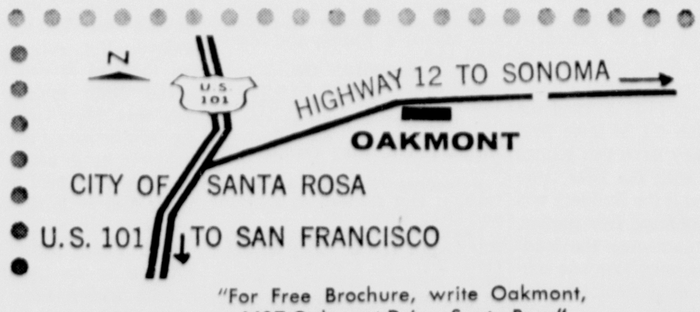

You've earned it.

Good friends . . . laughter . . . lazy breakfasts on the patio . . . a golf game at your doorstep. This is what you've worked for: LIVING in the Valley of the Moon, at OAKMONT! When it's time to unwind, and your sons and daughters are on their own, you won't want the care of a large house. The answer? OAKMONT! Here are elegant homes and garden apartments designed for maximum convenience. And moderately priced. Complete maintenance, if you wish—or, if you prefer to putter, it's your garden—Go to it!

The magic number is 45. That's the age when LIFE BEGINS in OAKMONT, the UNretiring community. It's designed for active adults: you'll see them playing the 18-hole championship golf course, enjoying the Olympic-sized swimming pool, or bowling on the green. There's riding, fishing, exploring, everything! Step inside a $500,000 recreation center with billiards, auditorium and sauna baths. See for yourself—there's more active fun waiting for you at the UNretiring community, OAKMONT!

Everyone's Talking About THE MEADOWS
TERRA LINDA

WHY? . . . Because this award-winning apartment community has everything you are looking for: Furnished or unfurnished apartments and townhouses . . . a relaxed setting of incomparable beauty situated on 25 acres . . . family buildings separated from adult buildings . . . all schools just steps away . . . townhouse units have over 1500 sq. ft. with their own private outdoor patios.

THE OAK VIEW CLUB — your own Private Club, is just a short walk from your beautiful Apartment or Townhouse. There is a putting green, lockers, men's and women's lounges, showers and sauna baths . . . 2 wind-free championship tennis courts acclaimed as the best in Marin County . . . two large heated swimming pools and a wading pool . . . shuffleboard, ping-pong and a large, comfortable sunning area . . . all this amidst rolling hills, studded with ancient oaks and beautifully landscaped.

THE CLUB HOUSE itself is luxuriously furnished . . . the cocktail lounge is carpeted and has a huge fireplace . . . intimate social-dining room . . . spacious facilities for private receptions, parties, bridge, teen-age dances and indoor movies.

APARTMENTS consist of one, two and three bedrooms.

TOWNHOUSES consist of two and three bedrooms, 1½ baths.

CHOICES of parquet flooring or area carpeting. All are beautifully draped. All have louvered doors within. Kitchens are completely electric. All refrigerators are self-defrosting and have separate freezer tops. THESE UNITS ARE THE ONLY ONES IN MARIN COUNTY WITH CENTRAL AIR CONDITIONING, THERMOSTATICALLY CONTROLLED BY YOU.

Rents start at $160 per month and afford family membership in the Oakview Club.

MODEL apartments, townhouses and the Oakview Club are open for YOUR inspection. We invite you to compare The Meadows with ANY other apartment development in Marin County before renting.

DIRECTIONS: Past San Rafael take Terra Linda turnoff, continue to the end of Freitas Parkway, and then you enter THE MEADOWS.

OPEN every day, 8:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.

New Book On Jews Upsets French

By GEORGE W. HERALD
Worldwide Press Service

PARIS — French literary circles are in an uproar over the book "The Jews" by Roger Peyrefitte, a cousin of Information Minister Alain Peyrefitte. Almost overnight it has become the country's No. 1 best-seller; 75,000 copies have been sold within two weeks. Its publisher, Flammarion, is now preparing a second and a third printing, and the end of the bonanza is not in sight.

All this despite, or perhaps because of, a unanimously hostile reaction from reviewers; and legal steps taken by the Rothschild family.

The book is a success de scandale that would throw a disturbing light on the French state of mind if it could not be assumed that most of the book's buyers thus far have been people named in it or relatives.

In fact the book contains almost as many names as the "Bottin Mondain," the Paris Social Register. This is because the author not only mentions all Jews who ever achieved any sort of fame anywhere, but innumerable families who have turned from Judaism for generations, and others who never even thought they had Jewish ancestors.

Peyrefitte's alleged purpose was to "prove" that practically everyone has Jewish forebears, and to achieve this feat he employed a psueudo - scientific method called "onomastic," which consists of tracing ancestors with Jewish - sounding names.

Typically, he opens his book with this sentence:

"On Jan. 1, 1963, the anniversary of Our Lord . . . General de Gaulle certainly did not think of his ancestors, the Jews Kolb; nor Chancellor Adenauer of his ancestors, the Jews Adenauer; nor the president of Italy of his ancestors, the Jews Segni; nor the King of Sweden of his ancestor, the half-Jew Bernadotte; nor the ex-King of Italy of his maternal ancestors the Montenegrine Jews Petrovitch Niejoch; nor Arch-Duke Otto von Hapsburg of his ancestors, the Jewess Henriquez, mother of Ferdinand the Catholic; nor the King of the Belgians of his ancestor, the Jewess Peireira from whom his great-grandmother Bragance was descended; nor Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands of his ancestor, the Jewess Pacheco; nor Queen Elizabeth of her maternal ancestors, the Jews Bowes-Lyon; nor the Duke of Edinburgh of his ancestors, the Jews Haucke; nor did President Kennedy in the White House and Vice President Johnson think of their ancestors, the Jews Kennedy and Johnson."

In a few instances, Peyrefitte offers verifiable data for his assertions. In others he merely affirms without proof, and in most cases he simply speculates.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, for example, mentioned in a speech made in West Germany that one of his maternal ancestors was a German named Kolb. This prompted Peyrefitte to do some "research" and to "discover" that there existed many Italian Jews called Colbi as well as three Kolbs in the "Who's Who of World Jewry."

Adding to this that a Jew named Golle lived in Alsace in 1788 and that a M. de Gaulle-Meyer resided in Brittany in the 19th Century, the author arrives at the conclusion that the French chief of state bears a name "with definite Judaic connotations."

There is, of course, no limit to this sort of nonsense. Peyrefitte gingerly affirms that even many notorious anti - Semites such as the Spanish inquisitor Torquemada, the French royalist Charles Maurras, and the Nazi leader Adolf Hitler were descended from Jews. Under these conditions, he argues, anti - Semitism defeats itself; since the Jews have already penetrated everywhere, nobody can any longer be sure of his own ancestry.

Peyrefitte poses as a friend and admirer of the Jews. But in between the roll calls, he spreads some of the most vicious hate propaganda poured out since the fall of the Third Reich.

The book is written in fiction form. A wealthy young baron, Saul de Goldschild, wants to marry a pretty gentile girl named Osmonde, but both must overcome the prejudices of their families. The story relates their struggle, and in the process a certain Georges Sarre, Osmonde's mentor, tells them how many people have preceded them in mixed marriages, and in the end they marry.

The trouble is that the author uses this seemingly inoffensive framework to reproduce, in the name of "objectivity," extensive passages from the worst anti-Semitic tracts published in Europe in the past 100 years. In many cases these texts are unrefuted; in others his fictional hero Georges Sarre makes a weak effort to refute them pro forma.

The net result is that two familiar caricatures emerge: that of the fat, wealthy Jew—pushing, greedy, money-mad, oversmart and oversexed—and that of the poor orthodox Jew who has a peculiar odor and whose quaint Oriental customs make him a stranger.

The author's pet villains are the real-life Rothschilds. Throughout the book, he does everything to make them look monstrous or ridiculous and to discredit their private lives.

Peyrefitte is a man who should know better. He belongs to a distinguished and highly cultured French family. He started out as a diplomat but soon had to leave the Quai d'Orsay as a self-confessed pervert.

Peyrefitte seems to have overplayed his hand. He may rake in a lot of cash, but he has lost his literary standing in Europe. The entire French literary community is turning from him in disgust.

Lawmakers From Marin Are Thrifty

Marin's two legislators were comparatively frugal in their legislative expenses during calendar year 1964.

This is reflected in figures compiled by Capital News Service from records of State Controller Alan Cranston.

Sen. John F. McCarthy, R-San Rafael, drew a total of $10,087, which includes a salary of $6,000 plus living expense, per diam, and mileage. Among the 39 senators listed, McCarthy ranked 16th in the amount of expenditures.

The senators' expenses ranged from a high of $17,233 to a low of $8,257.

Of the 78 Assemblymen listed, William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, drew $10,385. This ranked 61st in the amount of expenditures.

Assemblymen's expenses ranged from a high of $17,605 to a low of $8,452.

Top Castro Aide Rumored Killed

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — A radio station operated by the civilian-military junta said Friday night that former Cuban Minister of Industries Ernesto Guevara was killed last April in the Dominican revolt.

Radio San Domingo gave no further details.

Guevara dropped from public view in Cuba five months ago after Premier Fidel Castro relieved him of his post.

New State Fair Plans Settled

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State officials have agreed on a plan for a greatly expanded state fair on a new site at Sacramento.

The California Exposition and Fair Corp., a private nonprofit group which will operate the proposed fair, announced plans yesterday to open the new exposition on a 1,000-acre site beside the American River in 1968.

An executive committee appointed by the legislature is coordinating plans for the $33 million fair, which would operate the year around and include an aquatic park, golf course, race track and a center portraying California history.

Head-On Collision Fatal To Motorist

LIVERMORE (AP) — Robert W. Braden, 44, of Livermore, died last night when his car veered across a U.S. 50 dividing marker 10 miles east of Livermore and collided head-on with another car, the Highway Patrol said.

His wife, Anna, 49, was in fair condition at a local hospital with multiple injuries. The driver of the other car, Russell Jasper, 21, Murphys, also was in fair condition at the hospital.

Long-Missing Sailor Shows Up In Samoa

PAGO PAGO, American Samoa (AP)—A long-missing traveler of the seas, 24-year-old David Meigs of Atherton, Calif., turned up safely Friday at this South Pacific Island after 130 days aboard his trimaran.

Meigs, long the object of a search, sailed his crippled boat anti-climactically into the harbor he left more than four months ago on a projected solo voyage to Hawaii.

"Are you David Meigs?" asked Howard Aspinall of Grand of the island, who met Meigs' trimaran, the Extended Adolescence.

"Yes," said the bearded seafarer.

Meigs, whose first thoughts were of his first shower, first shave and first beer in four months, said storms ripped apart his nylon sails and twice almost snapped the vessel's mast.

He said, "Once I got extremely sick and really believed I was going to die." He said he lost 25 pounds on the voyage, which began April 12.

The adventurer said he had sailed 1,400 miles north of Pago Pago before he turned back because of storm damage. He said he ate well at the beginning from provisions, then speared tuna and ate "little flying fish that came aboard."

Meigs will be given a complete medical examination at a hospital and then may have an extended time to regain his land legs.

His draft board wants him to take another physical examination in San Mateo, Calif.

He is a son of Mrs. Alice Richards of 14 Flood Circle, Atherton.

Leukemia Girl Fails To Catch Saving Disease

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A Ventura youngster, exposed by her mother to chicken pox in hopes of staving off terminal leukemia, is reported in weakened condition at UCLA Medical Center Children's Clinic.

Joy Lynne Evans, 4, recently has had increasing trouble breathing, has developed a rapid pulse and has been in pain from a swollen spleen, her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lucial Johnson, said yesterday.

Exposed to a boy with chicken pox Aug. 1, the girl has shown no symptoms of the childhood illness.

Joy's mother, Mrs. Sharon Evans, 24, said she was told that some leukemia patients' lives have been lengthened up to a year by such exposure. Most medical experts say such leukemia treatment is not recognized however.

Plane Sabotage Device Shown

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Scientists are on the verge of perfecting a major weapon against airliner sabotage, it was learned yesterday.

It is a device that "smells" the presence of vapors or odors emanating from an explosive substance such as dynamite. It is so promising that the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) has awarded the Illinois Technical Research Institute in Chicago a $176,962 contract to build a full size prototype model.

Sabotage still is under investigation as a possibility in the crash of a United Air Lines jet into Lake Michigan Tuesday night, killing all 30 aboard. Since 1933, 173 persons have died in U.S. airliner sabotage cases and another 59 have been killed in bomb-destroyed foreign planes.

Salaries In Community Services

As a public service, the Independent-Journal continues its policy of listing salaries of public employees.

The two employees of the Marin City Community Services District work on a part time basis. Business Superintendent Daniel F. Winters receives $1,200 annually, while General Manager Harrison Dailey is paid $600 per year.

Only full-time employee of the Gallinas Village Community Services District is maintenance operator David Scott, who receives $4,200 yearly.

Directors Herbert C. Belben Jr., Mrs. Alys Durenberger, Eugene Campbell, John Miller and Harry W. Thomas receive $10 for each meeting they attend. District secretary Helen O'Brien is paid $15 per meeting.

Only employee of the Muir Beach Community Services District is Charles Graham, who receives $1,800 yearly.

Court Dismisses Extradition Bid

Extradition proceedings against Dr. Robert Haskell, Sausalito resident charged in Missouri with felony child stealing, were dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court by Judge Peter Allen Smith.

The action followed report by Dr. Haskell's attorney here, Howard K. Morehouse, that civil proceedings in the matter have been instituted in Kansas City, Mo., and hearing is scheduled in that city Aug. 30.

Dr. Haskell, of 585 Bridgeway, allegedly returned the youngest of his three daughters, Gilda, 10, to Marin County against terms of a 1959 divorce suit.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Man Depends More And More On Life-Extending Gadgetry

VAN DELLEN

The ingenious pacemakers that stimulate stubborn hearts are being improved constantly. The unit is inserted under the skin of the abdomen and connected to the heart with wires. The wire electrodes, made of the new alloy, Elgiloy, resist deterioration and add to the long-term use of the device.

The batteries, the weakest link, may last for years, but their life is variable and some cease to function earlier than anticipated. This occurred in five of 349 implants, a small percentage but serious when the individual is far away from the hospital.

RESEARCH IN organ transplants and artificial substitutes is a fast-moving field full of implied promise that will create future problems. When there is progress in a certain field, we tend to forget what the old was like. When a man's life is prolonged with an electric heart beat stimulator, he lives in constant fear that a wire will break or the battery will give out. Failures bring criticism to the physician for not maintaining the instrument in peak condition. This is anticipated as we utilize more and more mechanical gadgets to keep people alive.

Modern medicine is creating semi-artificial persons. Eyeglasses help him see and hearing aids reopen the world of sound. He can chew with his false teeth and is able to obtain a lifelike prosthesis when an extremity is lost. There are false noses, ears, eyelashes, and nails; wigs are available for those who want a different coiffure or to hide a bald spot.

BUT THESE are minor accomplishments compared with transplanting corneas, by-passing obstructed arteries with knitted dacron tubes, kidney transplants, and the use of artificial internal organs. My only concern is that we may lose our perspective and in time concentrate on prolonging death, instead of life.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

SANDALS

F. H. writes: A shoe salesman told me the feet never will return to normal after wearing flat-heeled sandals for years. Is this true? I have done this for a long time because I have trouble being fitted with closed shoes.

REPLY

Your feet may be normal now, despite the remark of the salesman. The inhabitants of many agricultural countries—including Mexico — wear flat-heeled sandals all their life and they have good feet.

LOST SENSE OF SMELL

P. F. writes: I lost my sense of smell. I can't smell anything and don't get the flavor of what I eat. This happened twice before. Any chance of this straightening itself out?

REPLY

Yes, as it did twice before. The sense of taste usually disappears when the sense of smell is lost.

SINUS TEST

O. V. writes: What is the transillumination test for sinus disease?

REPLY

The individual sits in a dark room and a special light is used to illuminate the sinuses below and above the eyes. The light is held in the mouth to outline the maxillary sinuses and under the eyebrow for the frontal sinuses.

CHILDHOOD ULCER

Mrs. G. writes: Could a 6-year-old boy have a duodenal ulcer?

REPLY

Yes, the medical profession is becoming increasingly aware that bizarre abdominal pain in children may be due to peptic ulcer.

Hamilton Base's Farm For Pheasants

See Page M2

A 'Pheasant Farm' At The Air Base

Hamilton Preserve Offers Airmen Best Of Shooting

Getting up with the birds is common practice for Uncle Sam's early-rising and high-flying airmen.

What's not so common at Hamilton Air Force Base is that the bird population there includes thousands of Mongolian pheasants and other game birds who strut about the jet base at will.

Now established residents of the North Marin base, these birds were introduced only two years ago. And because of their presence, Hamilton Base has become a paradise far beyond its scenic beauty to the enthusiastic hunter and to the discriminating gourmet.

HOW DID IT get started?

Early in 1963, conservation-minded people, bent on improving the land area of the base as well as providing recreation for the assigned military personnel, set out to develop an expanse of ground just southeast of the base's bustling runway.

It was noted that the area was especially suitable for use as a hunting preserve.

It was this thought that brought a quick response from the base "farmers."

VOLUNTEER airmen converged on the site. Some operated tractors and plows; others waited impatiently for the sowing of soft wheat, rice, and other grain foods.

"Operation Pheasant Farm" was well under way!

When the first seeds began to bud, spectators from throughout the base, including military dependents from the distant housing area, came daily to observe progress.

Meanwhile, conservation officials began discussing the "ins" and "outs" of raising pheasants and other game birds. Eggs were procured along with a few adult pheasants to mother the expected brood.

EQUIPMENT FOR the farm included feeders, brooders, watering troughs, incubators and, of course, a home.

While other items were mostly requisitioned, borrowed or manufactured, the pheasants lived in pens constructed by the volunteer airmen.

With the purchasing of additional pheasants and the transferring of hatched eggs from the incubators to the brooder pens, Hamilton's newest and most unusual family of dependents began to grow.

The breeding process became so effective that by year's end more than 1,600 chicks had popped into the world. And several hundreds, of adult size, were released into the rapidly growing grain fields, to the delight of first-year season hunters.

TODAY AT Hamilton, pheasant farming is a regular business. It has a farm manager, T/Sgt. William Ramsay of Huntington, W. Va., and one assistant manager, A/2c Norman Meyers, 24, of Lancaster, Calif.

"Learning while doing is part of our job," says the 37-year-old Ramsay. "The birth rate of the chicks is much higher than we anticipated, so naturally this keeps us pretty much on the go because the younger birds require more attention."

This "attention" includes one important phase of pheasant breeding—a weekly debeaking to prevent the birds from harming one another.

"THIS IN itself is quite a chore when you figure that right now we have more than 950 birds in the pens," Ramsay says.

Although Hamilton's pheasant farm is situated adjacent to the runway where supersonic F-101 jet interceptors of the 84th Fighter Interceptor Squadron are constantly on takeoff or landing, the birds that are released find the brush of the hunting preserve most desirable.

Now, during the summer months when the sun rays cascade down upon the green shrubbery and flowery gardens that abound in the housing areas of Hamilton, it is not unusual to see a colorfully garbed pheasant emerge from within, perk up its gangling neck and strut proudly around the base.

THIS IS just another reason why the Air Defense Command base in Marin is considered one of the most attractive installations in the U. S. Air Force by airmen and officers.

Where else could they enjoy pheasant shooting, without leaving the base?

DESPITE THE misspelled word, the warning on the sign above is plain for would-be "poachers" at Hamilton Air Force Base's pheasant-stocked game preserve. That and the sign seen in the cover photo reproduced at right are part of the program to protect pheasants until they reach adulthood, to limit the number of shooters in an area to 20 at any one time as a safety precaution, and to enforce all federal game laws. PINNING COAT LAPELS KEEPS 'EM IN SHAPE

It's difficult to keep the best press and sharp shape in a suit when you have to hang it in a crowded closet —especially in light-weight summer suits. Here is a practical tip from the National Institute of Drycleaning to help you keep coats from being flattened and insure the shape your drycleaner has so carefully restored.

Simply turn the lapels up and pin them together with a common straight pin when your suitcoat is hanging in the closet. When unpinned the lapels will retain the fashionable rounded, shaped look for a longer period of time.

BABY PHEASANT CHICKS see the light for the first time, seconds after being hatched in the Hamilton Air Force Base incubator. In 30 minutes they will be transferred to a brooder house where temperatures start at about 100 degrees.

WILLIAM RAMSAY, technical sergeant and manager of the Hamilton Air Force Base "pheasant farm" begins transferring half-hour-old chicks to the warm brooders where they will remain a week while temperatures are lowered gradually to the normal outdoor level. Then the young birds will be released in pens on the farm.

THE BROODER HOUSE makes a happy home for pheasant chicks. Each brooder can accommodate 200 of the little birds. (Additional photos on pages M4 and M5)

Stereo Hi-Fi

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

Does the servicing of component home music systems differ from the servicing of standard brand radio consoles? Yes, it does. In general, a commercial radio console can be compared to a simple box type camera and a component system can be compared to a highly versatile multi-lens camera. The box camera has relatively few adjustments, but is limited in its ability to take pictures; whereas, the elaborate camera has many adjustments and can take excellent pictures under many light conditions. In the repair of the box camera, there are very few parts that are adjustable, so it is more a matter of making the few parts perform properly. When repairing the versatile camera, there are many precise adjustments that can be made to bring each part of the camera into optimum performance.

What tests and adjustments are generally applicable to components? Since each component of a complete home music system is in itself a precision instrument, it is manufactured with all of the adjustments necessary to properly align the unit for maximum performance. For example, the record changer of a component system has the following adjustments which are made by an experienced component service department: Adjustment for the precise weight of the tone arm and its cartridge as it bears down on the record groove; Adjustment for the exact area on the lead-in groove of a record where the stylus sets down; Adjustment to balance the tone arm and its cartridge with respect to gravity so that it will not be affected by uneven surfaces; Adjustment for the tripping mechanism at the end of a record; and Adjustments for correct record changing of the mechanism.

A component amplifier contains adjustments to keep the bias on the output stages at an exact value to give the minimum amount of distortion. A component tuner contains check points for accurate measurements of the alignment of the various circuits, together with a multiplicity of adjusting circuits to allow each section to be tuned to optimum performance standards. The stereo multiplex section has several adjustments to provide maximum stereo separation, and minimum distortion. Loudspeaker cabinets of a component system have means of adjusting for smooth bass response.

A service department experienced with the servicing of components uses laboratory test instruments to keep each unit performing at its best. A precision instrument requires precision care.

YOUNG PHEASANTS, about 12 weeks old, strut around in the protection of their pens at the Hamilton Air Force Base game preserve. When they reach the age of 16 weeks, they will be released on the grounds set aside as a conservation and shooting area.

YOU LOOK across the unspoiled expanses of the Hamilton Air Force Base "pheasant farm" and see — not a pheasant, but a quail perched atop a brush pile in the hunting area. Although quail have not been raised by the game preserve personnel, many make Hamilton their home because of the exceptional food supply available to them there. Mongolian pheasants raised especially for the purpose remain the the principal game bird in the recreational area of the big North Marin air base.

A YOUNG male bird is debeaked by T/Sgt. William Ramsay, the game farm manager at Hamilton Base. The process is necessary to prevent the birds from injuring each other. Ramsay has engaged in extensive study of game birds and how to raise them since being selected to operate the unusual preserve on the air base premises. This bird will be ready for release in a few weeks.

The New Sausalitan

She's One Of Famed Puppeteers

SAUSALITO'S BOAT HARBOR and the fine craft moored there share the interest of pretty Sally Armour with the fine shops of the bayside Marin city. A member of the famed Les Poupees de Paris marionette troupe now performing in San Francisco, Sally is making her summer home in Sausalito. And the six-foot, three-inch beauty is seen frequently there.

Sausalitans like to think that their population includes just about every type of person.

But they'll admit that a recent acquisition is strictly one of her kind—a strikingly beautiful, six-foot-three-inch tall puppeteer.

She's Sally Armour, one of the featured puppeteers with the famed Les Poupees de Paris marionette musical comedy revue now performing in San Francisco at the Wharf Theater, next door to the Wax Museum on Fisherman's Wharf.

AND SALLY never fails to attract admiring gazes from Sausalito residents and visitors alike as she wanders leisurely around the town.

The lithe, 24-year-old brunette, who could easily pass for a show girl, is a native of Peoria, Ill., but now calls New York City her hometown. She was quick to discover Marin County and Sausalito when the troupe came West, and she has been living with Sausalito friends this summer and will continue to do so for the duration of the Les Poupees' run in San Francisco.

She is, incidentally, the lone female member of the highly skilled puppeteer crew.

SALLY, WHO attended the University of Arkansas theater school and then moved to New York to study at the Berghoff and Paul Mann Theater Schools, began her career as an actress and "somehow ended up touring the United States and Canada with a children's theater road company."

"It was steady work, at least, and it was only natural to slip into the children's puppet shows where I often did five or six voices and where my dramatic training came in handy," Sally says.

She also spent a summer with Katharine Hepburn and Robert Ryan at the Stratford, Conn., Shakespeare Festival.

WHEN THE world famous marionette showmen Sid and Marty Krofft began putting the Les Poupees de Paris musical, the hit of the New York World's Fair last year, on the road, they needed many more puppeteers. Sally was a natural choice.

However, being a puppeteer in Les Poupees de Paris is no easy task for either man or woman. Six puppeteers must handle 240 marionettes during the hour-long show; and the marionettes stand over three feet tall and weigh well over 20 pounds.

The show, itself, was written by Sammy Cahn and Jimmy Van Heusen and features the actual voices of such top stars as Pearl Bailey, Milton Berle, Edie Adams, Gene Kelly, Annie Farge, Tony Martin, Phil Silvers, Liberace, Bing Crosby, Frank Sinatra, Loretta Young and Dean Martin.

NOT ONLY must the puppets' movements be synchronized with the music and dialogue—all recorded—but the puppeteers perform such difficult feats with the marionettes as a "dancing waters ballet," an hilarious 18th century musicale, an ice-rink scene and a number of duets plus a fun-filled circus.

Sally's day is a long one—and there are six work days a week for her. There are, for instance, two matinee shows each afternoon, at 2 p.m. and 3:30 p.m., with an additional 4:30 show on Saturdays and Sundays; and two evening performances beginning at 8 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. The theater is open Tuesday through Sunday.

Sally's leisure time, mornings and her day off, are generally spent sunbathing on a Sausalito hillside home porch and wandering around the "fabulous shops" in town.

WITH A SOFT spoken voice and flowing movement of body, Sally Armour appears a relaxed and easy-going person—an appearance supported by a disarming smile. But as she lights a cigarette when she talks, you can see a slight tenseness resulting from a quick, active mind, and nervous energy.

"After four or five performances a day, it is a wonderful feeling to leave San Francisco and relax and unwind in Sausalito; in fact, almost every place I have seen in Marin County is wonderful—not only because of the physical beauty, but because it seems leisurely yet still very sophisticated," she explains.

"There is certainly no place in the United States like Sausalito and I doubt seriously if there are many areas like Marin County as a whole. Yet, if you want the cosmopolitan atmosphere, you are just minutes from San Francisco," she adds.

AS FOR SALLY, "you just can't get much more cosmopolitan than the slick Les Poupees de Paris musical revue," she says, adding that the show cost over $350,000 to stage originally, with settings to rival the best offerings of The Lido and the old Ziegfeld Follies. The chinchilla coat and costume for the Pearl Bailey "doll" cost $5,000 alone.

However, speaking from her experience in children's theater, Sally is quick to point out that Les Poupees is just as exciting for the youngsters as the adults . . . particularly the visit backstage after the show.

Les Poupees de Paris, Sally says, is the type of show everyone remembers who sees it. And Sally, all six feet three inches of her, is the type of girl who is remembered, even in Sausalito, by everyone who meets her.

IN THE WHARF THEATER on San Francisco's Fisherman's Wharf, puppeteer Sally Armour helps get ready for a performance. Seven puppeteers must handle 240 marionettes for each show. And in addition to two afternoon and two evening performances daily except Monday (with a third matinee on Saturday and Sunday), there are rehearsals that must be held. The musical marionette show runs through Labor Day. (Photos by Don Aron)

The Knoll Offers A Special Way Of Life

Livable indeed are the new townhouses at The Knoll, Peacock Gap, San Rafael.

The eight acre site is a completely private community consisting of individual homes with two, three and four bedrooms and two and three baths. Prices range from $37,850 to $49,850.

Planners and architects for The Knoll are Bushnell, Jessup, Murphy and Van De Weghe, and they have created a unique townhouse effect featuring the mansard shingled roof line with exteriors of redwood. D. M. Christensen of San Rafael is the developer.

FEATURES INCLUDE fireplaces, skylights, vinyl wall coverings, dishwashers and disposals, General Electric Americana self-cleaning ovens, two-door frost-free refrigerators and luxurious carpets and drapes. Electricity is used throughout, as homes are Pacific Gas and Electric Gold Medallion designated.

For recreation, residents need only step outside to use the private putting green, swim in the 75-foot swimming pool or use the sauna baths.

A wonderful entertainment spot is a private Buckeye Club exclusively for members and their guests.

Since Peacock Gap is a sports center, residents may use the 18-hole championship golf course, enjoy rugby, cricket and lacrosse games and join the tennis and swimming club.

THE KNOLL provides a special way of life for those who are giving up a large home, but who still like to live luxuriously without maintenance chores. The extensive garden with lush native planting has been skillfully created by Royston, Hanamoto, Mayes and Beck for outdoor enjoyment. Unusual lighting effects, native stone walls, aggregate and brick give pleasing contrasts to this outstanding landscape.

A model home has been furnished by Beatrice Bliss Rindal so as to appeal to almost everyone for it combines traditional with contemporary with antique accents to blend the whole into a most livable place.

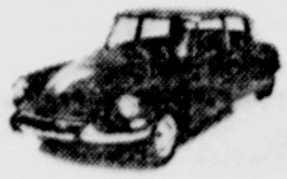

The living room in the model home is approached from a generous entrance hall with marble vinyl floors. Off this is a large two-car garage and a huge util-

Capt. William Richardson: 'Sea Dog', Trader, Rancher

Grantee Of The Rancho Saucelito Had Colorful And Varied Career

By FLORENCE DONNELLY
Independent-Journal Historian

The recent identification of an old daguerrotype, the subject, of which had been a mystery for years, as a picture of William A. Richardson, grantee of the Saucelito Rancho, brought back recollections of a story filled with adventure, romance and tragedy.

For more than a century, historians had sought a picture of Richardson, but to no avail.

Then a skilled daguerrotypist, writing a book on his special field, visited the California State Library in Sacramento and asked to see any daguerrotypes the library had in its historical archives. A tray of daguerrotypes was brought to him. Noting damage to the frame of one of the pictures, he removed the covering to make repairs. And on the back of the picture was the identity of its subject—William Richardson.

CAPTAIN RICHARDSON, an Englishman born, according to historian Fr. John McGloin, in London on Aug. 27, 1795, went to sea at age 12. He was to captain several merchant vessels, but after losing a ship was reduced in rank to first mate. It was in that capacity that he was aboard the L'Orient, a whaler, that sailed around Cape Horn and northward into Arctic waters. On the return cruise, the ship came through the Golden Gate on Aug. 2, 1822. The captain was seeking fresh meat, water and other provisions for his crew.

Suddenly a cannon boomed from the land and the commandante, Ygnacio Martinez of the Presidio, gave the signal for the ship to drop anchor. The captain obeyed the commandante's order and because Richardson could speak Spanish, the first mate was sent ashore to explain the pacific nature of the visit.

Richardson was given a friendly welcome by the commandante who assured the young Englishman he would be given the supplies he needed and then invited him to attend a small fiesta he was giving that afternoon at his home. The visitor accepted and was introduced by Don Martinez to his family and his guests.

THE VISITOR found a delightful dancing partner in a daughter of his host, Senorita Maria Antonia Martinez. They made a handsome couple, the senorita, pretty and petite with almost coal black hair and flashing brown eyes, the Englishman, tall and slender, fair skinned with blue eyes and light brown hair.

The dancing and feasting went far on into the night. Richardson's captain sent the boatswain to tell the young Englishman to return to his ship but the visitor was having such a wonderful time that when he finally said farewell to Don Martinez and his family it was almost daylight. Naturally the captain was furious and immediately discharged Richardson from service.

WITH HIS few belongings Captain Richardson was rowed to the Presido once again, to the astonishment of Don Martinez. Captain Richardson explained what had happened and the hospitable don invited him to stay at the Martinez hacienda until he received permission to remain in the newly established Mexican province of California.

To become a Mexican citizen it was necessary to embrace the Catholic faith. Richardson was baptized a Catholic at the mission in San Francisco (Dolores) on June 16, 1823.

Richardson immediately petitioned the Mexican governor, Pablo de Sola, to grant him the privilege of domicile. The petition was granted by Governor Sola.

IN GRANTING the petition, Sola wrote: "Being aware that the petitioner, besides being a navigator, is conversant with and engaged in the occupation of a carpenter, I hereby grant the privilege he asks for with the obligation he receive and teach such young men as may be placed in his charge . . ."

Richardson now had a job to do and he did it. He saw the difficulty which existed in getting food and other supplies for the troops at the Presidio. With the aid of six Indians, whom he had taught the carpenter and shipwright trades, he built a launch and a boat to transport supplies from the pueblos of Santa Clara and San Jose. Before that provisions were brought in by ox carts.

Richardson also taught another group of Indians how to ferry the boats.

FOR THREE years Richardson was in charge of supply transportation to the Presidio. After that he was free to work independently. Navigation was his forte, so he assembled a small "fleet," a 15-ton vessel which he bought from the mission at Santa Clara, a rowboat on which he made extensive repairs and which he had bought from Mission Dolores, and a whale boat which had floated into the harbor, mute evidence of a tragedy at sea.

The ambitious young man also did business with ships which came into the harbor, mostly English and Russian. Richardson was given the privilege of supplying the ships with fresh water and wood.

From springs, in what are now the Sausalito hills, Richardson piped water to the shore and sold it by barrels to the ships.

WITH HIS Indians he went into the hills to get oak and redwood.

Richardson also charted the bay and the streams leading into it, locating submerged shoals and cross currents.

Having established himself in business, the Englishman asked Don Martinez for permission to marry Senorita Maria Antonia. The don and his family had grown to admire the young man, so parental consent was soon given.

The captain and the senorita were married at Mission Dolores May 15, 1825, by Padre Jose Altimira. From all parts of California came dons and their families to attend the religious observance and the week-long fiesta which followed.

IN 1830 CAPTAIN Richardson became a naturalized citizen of Mexico. The captain engaged in coast trade, mostly barter involving hides and tallow, otter and beaver skins, fresh meat and vegetables.

About five months after his marriage Richardson made a voyage to Sitka to bring back provisions. He was back in six months with commodities he sold to the Presidio and to the owners of ranchos around the bay.

WHILE HE was away, his wife gave birth to a daughter, who was named Mariana.

In 1829 Richardson went to Los Angeles, taking his family to Mission San Gabriel. Learning there was a great scarcity of goods in the Los Angeles area, Richardson decided to go to South America to get supplies.

He built a schooner at San Pedro and sailed aboard her to Peru. He returned in nine months and rejoined his family at San Gabriel where his son, Stephen, was born in 1830.

The Richardsons yearned for northern California. He made several voyages to South America which were financial successes, then sold his schooner and bought a team of horses to transport his family overland to Yerba Buena.

IN A DEPOSITION before the United States Land Commission on August 20, 1853, Captain Richardson stated that from June 1835 until June 1841 he had resided in Yerba Buena (later San Francisco) and that as far as he knew no lots in Yerba Buena had been granted to anyone prior to that. He said he received in October of 1835 a 100 vara lot by order of the alcalde, Don Francisco de Haro. The grant was on Dupont Street, now Grant Avenue near Clay.

Richardson pitched a tent on his Yerba Buena lot, the first dwelling in the town.

Richardson related how Alcalde de Haro received orders from the government to lay out a small town at Yerba Buena for the convenience of shipping. The order directed Richardson to assist de Haro and to reserve 200 varas all along the beach for government buildings. Richardson said that all these orders were carried out. At the time, the neighbors of the Richardsons were the people at the Presidio and at Mission Dolores. The Richardsons lived under the tent about three months, then moved into a small frame house. Then on the same property Richardson built a large adobe hacienda which became known as Casa Grande.

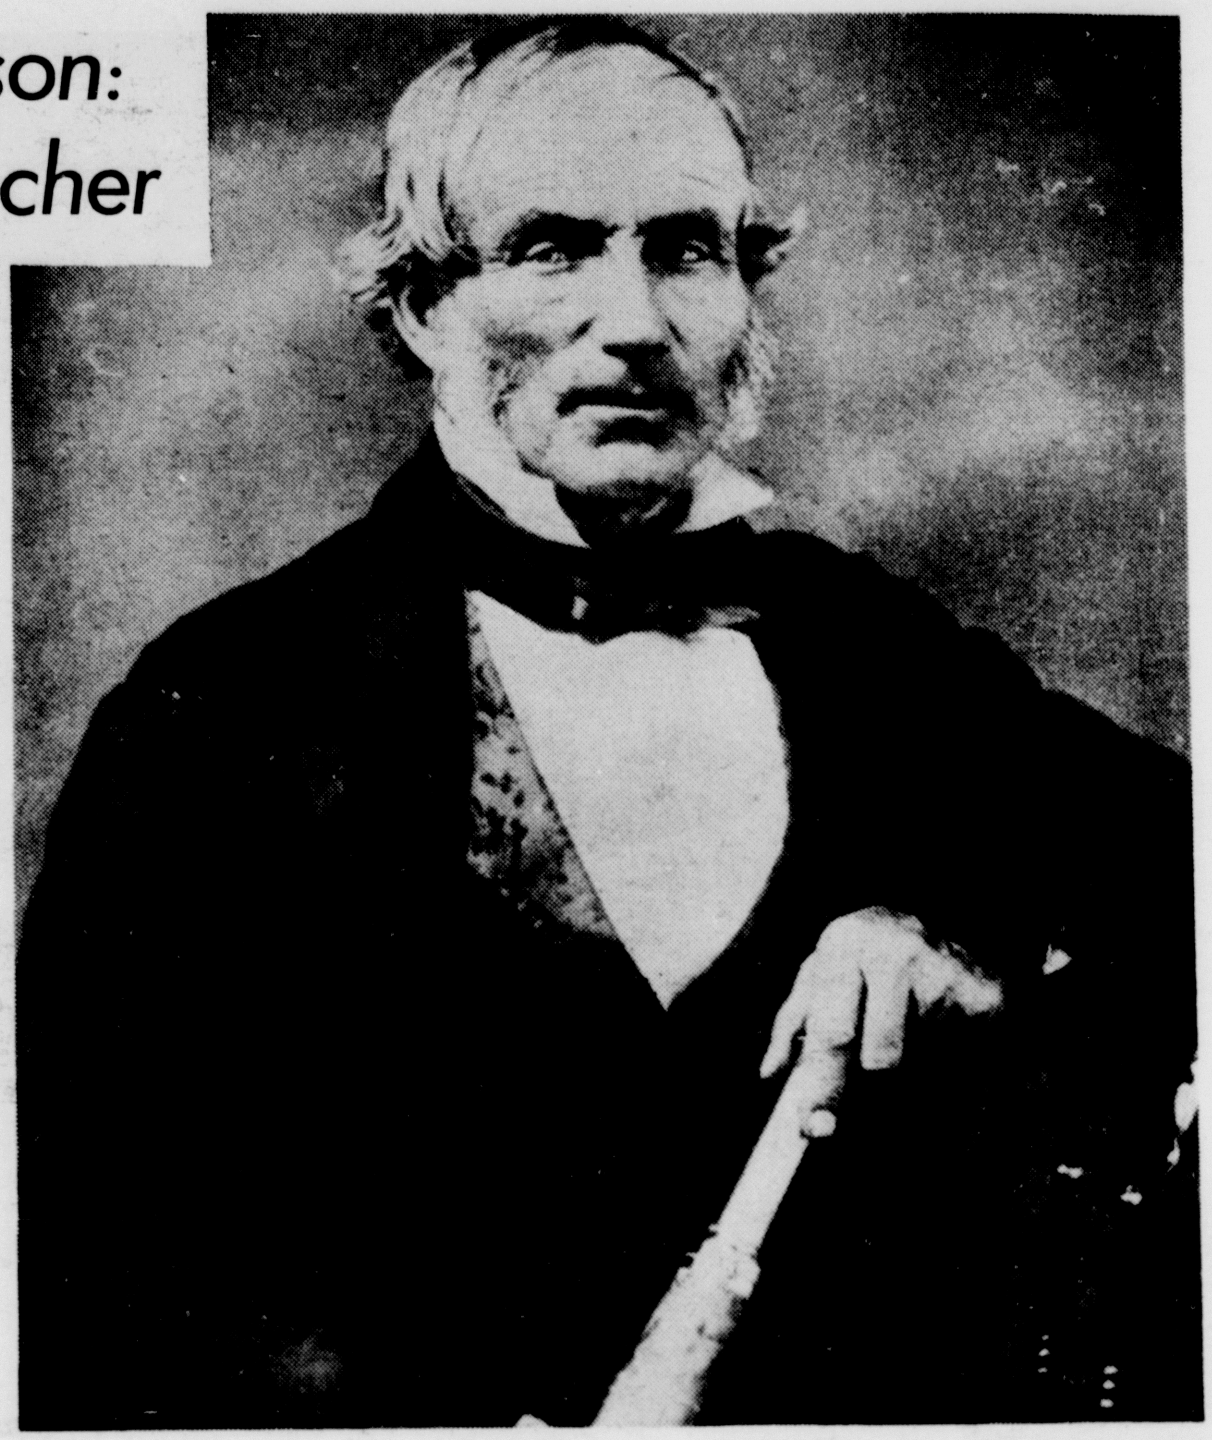

RICHARDSON was appointed captain of the port of San Francisco first by the Mexican governor and later by Gen. Mariano Vallejo.

Soon the Richardsons had close neighbors in Yerba Buena. Lots at that time were one hundred varas square and were granted by the alcalde for a price of about $25.

Stephen Richardson told of life at the hacienda in Yerba Buena. He said the house was never dull. It was built on "such large liberal plans because my parents loved company" and there were a dozen or more guests a day.

"STEVE," AS he was always called, a wonderful horseman,

UNTIL THIS OLD daguerrotype was identified at the California State Library in Sacramento, it was thought there was no existing portrait of Capt. William Richardson, grantee of the Saucelito Rancho, one of the founders of San Diego, first property owner at Yerba Buena (San Francisco), and expert ship's pilot and coastal trader. Here he holds a mariner's glass.

A Story Of Old Saucelito

Before The City There Was Rancho

STEVE RICHARDSON, son of the Saucelito Rancho grantee, Capt. William Richardson, lived to an advanced age, and was the source of much information about his father and early-day life in the Bay Area. He was one of California's most expert horsemen and frequently rode as grand marshal in parades in San Rafael where he lived after the Saucelito Rancho was lost. Continued from Page M8 would gallop across the sand dunes to visit at the Presidio, or see his young friends at ranchos on the peninsula.

Captain Richardson had long wanted land on the north side of the bay. He knew of the great natural resources of the country — the many springs, large forests and the wild game and fowl.

Captain Richardson made application for a land grant in what is now Marin County. His first application for Rancho Saucelito was filed in 1828, but the Mexican government denied it because the land was considered valuable for military defense. However, he continued to importune the authorities for the rancho which was granted him on Feb. 11, 1838. The rancho was three square leagues.

THE CAPTAIN built a small wooden house for his family and later an adobe to which several additions were made.

Steve wrote: "My early life in Sausalito was perhaps the happiest time of my life. The country was entirely untouched by man and the wild oats grew shoulder high in spite of the great herds of wild animals browsing in the fields. In a jaunt from Sausalito to San Rafael I would see enough elk, deer, bear and antelope to fill a good sized train. I never grew weary of riding through the wonderful forest land and over ridges overlooking the sea. I became one of the most expert vaqueros in Alta California.

"At this time my father's fortune was at its peak. His transportation business was very large. The settlement of Sutter near Sacramento had opened a new field of navigation by the river routes. He was rich in money, rich in ships, rich in land."

WILLIAM HEATH Davis, whose "Seventy Five Years in California" is a source book for historians, first became acquainted with Captain Richardson in July, 1838, when Davis was in the employ of Nathan Spear . At that time the Richardsons had two residences.

"The one at Yerba Buena, an adobe, contained a parlor, commodious bedrooms and a sitting and dining room which was used at times as a ball room," wrote Davis. "The walls were thick. Blinds or massive shutters closing the windows on the inside. The other residence was at Sausalito."

Davis said thousands of cattle, horses and sheep were on the Saucelito Rancho.

He described the captain and his wife, and said she was "a model of grace and dignity with a face full of expression. She was gifted with vivacity and intelligence and a little spice of satire gave an added charm to her winning manners."

DAVIS SAID Richardson's long practice as a mariner made him one of the best pilots for the bay and its entrance.

"Admirals and commodores of different nationalities would communicate with him from Callao, Valparaiso and Honolulu so that in case a vessel of their squadrons should visit San Francisco, she would fire two guns, one after the other, outside the heads. This was a signal for Richardson to go out and pilot her in. The captain had eight trained Indians, who had become proficient boatmen."

In 1846 a dark cloud from the East came and blotted out the sunny life of the dons of California. In the spring of 1846 Capt. John C. Fremont arrived in California with an armed force. Ostensibly his visit was peaceable, to survey a shorter route to the West Coast for the United States government. However, Fremont defied and insulted the Mexican authorities and as a result his arrest was ordered. He fled northward.

JUST WHAT orders Fremont received from the United States is a matter of conjecture. It is known that he talked with a Lieutenant Gillespie, a United States Army officer, who delivered letters from Secretary of State James Buchanan and others in Washington.

Fremont, in his memoirs, said: "The message brought me by Gillespie absolved me from my duties as an explorer and left me only my duty as an officer of the American Army, with the authentic knowledge that the chief object of the President was to take and hold possession of California."

Captain Richardson and other citizens of Mexico were greatly alarmed by the action that followed. On June 14, 1846, a group of Americans "captured" Sonoma and hoisted the Bear Flag. Later a party headed by Lt. Henry Ford surprised Californians who were staying at Rancho Olompali in Marin. After a brief "battle," the Californians fled to Rancho Saucelito where aboard one of Captain Richardson's schooners they made their escape to the Contra Costa shore.

CAPTAIN RICHARDSON and his family were at the Saucelito Rancho when Fremont came with about 100 men, including his bodyguard of Delaware Indians and his scout, the famed Kit Carson. Also at the rancho were more than 100 wives and children of the Californians.

In his book, Davis said Fremont and his men camped for three days at the Saucelito Rancho and forced Richardson to furnish them with beef and mutton.

"Fremont took away all the broken horses . . . and left Richardson with only four saddle horses for the use of the rancho of two or three thousand head of animals. He did not pay for the animals nor even give vouchers for them."

STEVE RICHARDSON said: "Fremont was not altogether good to look upon. He had a fine bearing, the make-up that commands obedience, but oh, what an eye! It was like the eye of some great predacious creature, cold, relentless, unforgiving . . ."

Fremont gave orders that the Richardson horses should be delivered to him in San Rafael where he and his men stayed at the mission.

It was June 28, 1846, that the brutal murder of three Californians took place in San Rafael. Jasper O'Farrell, a civil engineer and a man of unquestioned integrity who was at the mission, gave his version of the tragedy. It was never denied.

He said: "I was at San Rafael in June 1846 when Captain Fremont arrived at the mission with his troops. The second day after his arrival there a boat landed three men near the mouth of the estero on Point San Pedro. As soon as they were discovered by Fremont, three men (of whom Kit Carson was one) were detailed to meet them. They mounted their horses and, after advancing a few hundred yards, halted, and Carson returned to where Fremont was standing on a corridor of the mission with Gillespie, myself and others and said, 'Captain, shall I take these men prisoners?'"

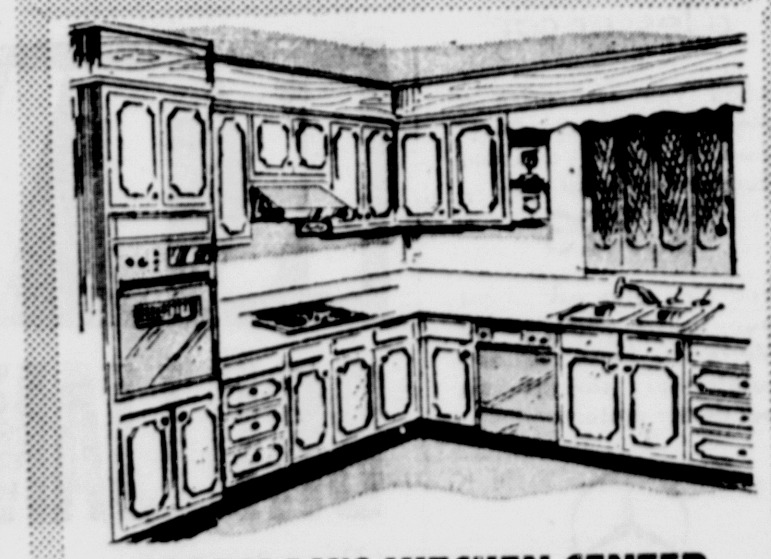

"IN RESPONSE Fremont waved his hand and said: 'I have no room for prisoners.'

"They then advanced to within 50 yards of the three unfortunate and unarmed Californians, alighted from their horses and deliberately shot them. One of them was an old and respected Californian, Don Jose Berreyesa, whose son was then alcalde of Sonoma. The others were twin brothers (Ramon and Francisco), sons of Francisco de Haro, a citizen of the pueblo of Yerba Buena."

THE BODIES of the slain trio remained where they fell and it was there Steve Richardson saw them when he brought the horses to Fremont.

The Richardsons, like all Californians, were horrified by the murders. But for lovely Mariana Richardson, said to be the most beautiful woman in California, it was a personal tragedy. The De Haro twins were close friends of Mariana and her brother, Steve. The young men were frequent guests at the Richardson hacienda and it was well known both of them loved Mariana.

William Richardson's Story: An Empire Of Land And Ships

IN HER YOUNGER years Mariana Richardson was famed for her beauty and was known as "the belle of California." Her patrician features are still evident in this photograph, taken of her with her husband, Manuel Torres, when they were in their late 70s. (Photo courtsey of David Torres)

With the occupation of California by the U.S., the dons and their families returned to their old way of life. While there was an uneasiness, the Californians cloaked this beneath apparent gaiety.

Captain Richardson cooperated with the military rulers. Commodore Stockton, first military governor of California, and Captain Richardson "became great friends," according to William Heath Davis. Stockton appointed Captain Richardson first collector of the port of San Francisco.

A BIG reception was given in honor of Commodore Stockton in Yerba Buena at the Richardson hacienda. There is no doubt that Mariana Richardson was the great attraction.

James H. Wilkins wrote of her: "Miss Richardson's beauty was perfect in every feature, but what made her incomparable was a complexion that no woman in the world ever had before or since—a marvelous mixture of the English and Spanish types . . . Besides her singular, almost Oriental beauty, Miss Richardson was the possessor of a charming manner and of a ready wit in conversation. Her figure was at once robust and graceful. She excelled in horsmanship . . . and was one of the most expert rifle shots in California."

MARIANA COULD not forget the inhumanity of the Americans under Fremont's direction and she would not marry anyone from his country. When she did marry, it was to a Peruvian, Manuel Torres, who was her own age.

The wedding took place in the crumbling chapel of Mission San Rafael Arcangel in April of 1848.

In January of 1848, gold was discovered in northern California. The gold was to bring fortunes to some, misfortune to others, including Captain Richardson.

William Heath Davis has written of how one business venture in which he and Richardson invested, the building of a steamboat for commerce on the inland waters to the gold country, fell through because of the timidity of a third partner.

"THE BUSINESS would have produced for us hundreds of thousands, if not a million or more dollars," Davis asserted.

Another Davis - Richardson venture, the construction of a wharf and warehouse for the new town of San Diego in exchange for property there, ended more happily for the pair, thanks to some amazing feats of seamanship and navigation by the captain aboard Davis' bark, the Hortensia, while transporting piles and other building materials.

When Captain Richardson was away from his Saucelito Rancho, his son-in-law, Manuel Torres, was in charge. An old Indian, Manico, was the pilot for ships that came into the bay.

LIFE MOVED on at the Saucelito Rancho.

Steve Richardson wrote of his father: "In 1850, my father had lived continuously in California for 28 years. His only capital was his knowledge of navigation but almost at the very outset he had laid the foundation for a growing business. I have no recollection of the time when he was not reckoned among the rich. There was always an abundance of things good to eat and things good to wear, both at Casa Grande, overlooking Yerba Buena, and at the Richardson hacienda across the bay. With the coming of the Americans he maintained an open handed hospitality . . .

"Meanwhile the value of our Sausalito Rancho was pyramiding every year. Before the American occupation we used to look on it as a nice little place, a comfortable home, but never as much as an asset otherwise. Its outside cash value might have been $25,000 or $30,000 and no more.

"BUT WITH the gold rush and the rapid growth of San Francisco, the great ranch with its miles of waterfront, with its acres of pasture land ideal for supplying the boom city with such prime necessities as butter, milk and cattle, began to climb in value until the worth of the property increased easily tenfold. As early as 1850 it could have been sold for a quarter of a million and it has been climbing in value ever since . . .

"Besides several bay schooners, my father owned three deep water vessels engaged in coastwide trade.

"And, as fate would have it, all three ships were wrecked within the space of six months. Each was a total loss and each carried a cargo that represented large investments.

"It was a staggering blow to my father. It destroyed a profitable business, swept clean his floating capital and compelled him to dispose of various odds and ends of property in order to meet pressing obligations. The ranch was clear and that was all.

"BUT THE stubborn old sea dog was not ready to quit . . . My father had a valuable acquaintance with monied men . . . His business name was good . . . It was his purpose to interest some of the new blood in a transportation company covering somewhat more than the field of his former operations. He had actually interested John Parrott and Henry Cowell, both later on multi-millionaires . . . But these keen men of affairs took a further survey of the situation and politely withdrew from the undertaking.

"But my father could not recognize defeat where he had always been a victor. Refused financial assistance on every side, he decided to re-enter the shipping business on his own resources . . .

"Worry and disappointment must have impaired the soundness of his judgment. At all events he committed financial suicide. He mortgaged the Rancho Saucelito for $60,000 with interest at 3 per cent a month, compounding monthly, and he firmly believed that, with the growing boom of California, he could readily pay the interest and the principal as well in a year or two at most.

"COMPETITION IN the shipping business became fierce . . . Rates were smashed overnight. It was into this fiery battle that my father projected himself with his pitiful little equipment. His second maritime adventure never paid expenses.

"The income from the rancho was large but sometimes it was drawn on to meet commercial deficiencies. My brother-in-law was a liberal spender and we still kept open house. The rancho was stripped of necessary breeding cattle in order to make both ends meet. Some faint effort was made to pay the interest charges but they mounted up insistently to such an extent that all effort to that end was abandoned.

"The rancho was even sold two or three times for taxes. Good friends of my father strongly advised him to make a financial clean-up while the opportunity remained but he held on with the tenacity of despair. At last the crash came and the mournful fragments of his business disappeared forever.

"THEN THE tired old sea animal came ashore to die. His affairs were in desperate condition. Long before, in the days of prosperity, he had deeded to my mother 640 acres of the rancho, including the family home, the waterfront and most of the land on which Sausalito is built . . .

"My father expected to die, in fact, he had no desire to live after his failure. His sole hope now was to save something from the wreck of his fortune and he realized that it required a stronger hand and a more experienced head than his or mine. Under these desperate conditions, he consulted with his attorney, Volney E. Howard. As I understood at the time, what might be called an equity in the property . . . still remained to my father.

"Attorney Howard introduced to my father Samuel R. Throckmorton, who was described as a wizard in the business line . . . The situation of the Sausalito property was explained to Mr. Throckmorton, who considered the outlook for salvage good, and a contract was entered into having that end in view.

"MY FATHER deeded the entire property to Mr. Throckmorton as trustee, giving him full power to manage the estate in every particular . . .

"For this part, Mr. Throckmorton agreed, at the end of three years, to deed over to William A. Richardson, or his heirs, the equal of one-fifth of the average land of the rancho, free from any debt or encumbrance whatever. The remainder was to go for the payment of debts and for Mr. Throckmorton's service . . .

"I must say that Mr. Throckmorton took hold of his work with great energy and apparent success. Instead of a stock range, he reorganized it as a dairy ranch, or rather as a series of dairy ranches. He knew what the tenants were making and saw to it they paid all the traffic would bear.

"IN THIS WAY he probably doubled or trebled the income . . . He was able to deal with money lenders on favorable terms and to take up the utterly ruinous 3 per cent a month loan, although the interest on the new loan was bad enough. He searched out other little sources of income such as selling cordwood to San Francisco.

"As an administrator, Mr. Throckmorton was an unqualified success."

Steve Richardson said his father deeded to Mariana (Mrs. Torres) and him the one-fifth interest in the Rancho Saucelito and had considered his wife well provided for as she had the 640 acres in Sausalito and prospects in her father's estate in Martinez.

Captain Richardson died at his hacienda in Sausalito on April 20, 1856. He was buried on a hilltop on the rancho which he loved so dearly. Later the body was moved to Mt. Olivet Cemetery in San Rafael.

A WOODEN headstone marked the grave, but this was destroyed when a grass fire swept across the cemetery.

The gracious life at the Saucelito Rancho was doomed. Captain Richardson's widow found life at the hacienda without her husband impossible. She sold her property in Sausalito to Throckmorton for about $10,000. Six years later he sold this property with about 200 more acres to the Sausalito Land and Ferry Co. for $550,000. He also sold the Lime Point Tract to the United States government for a huge sum.

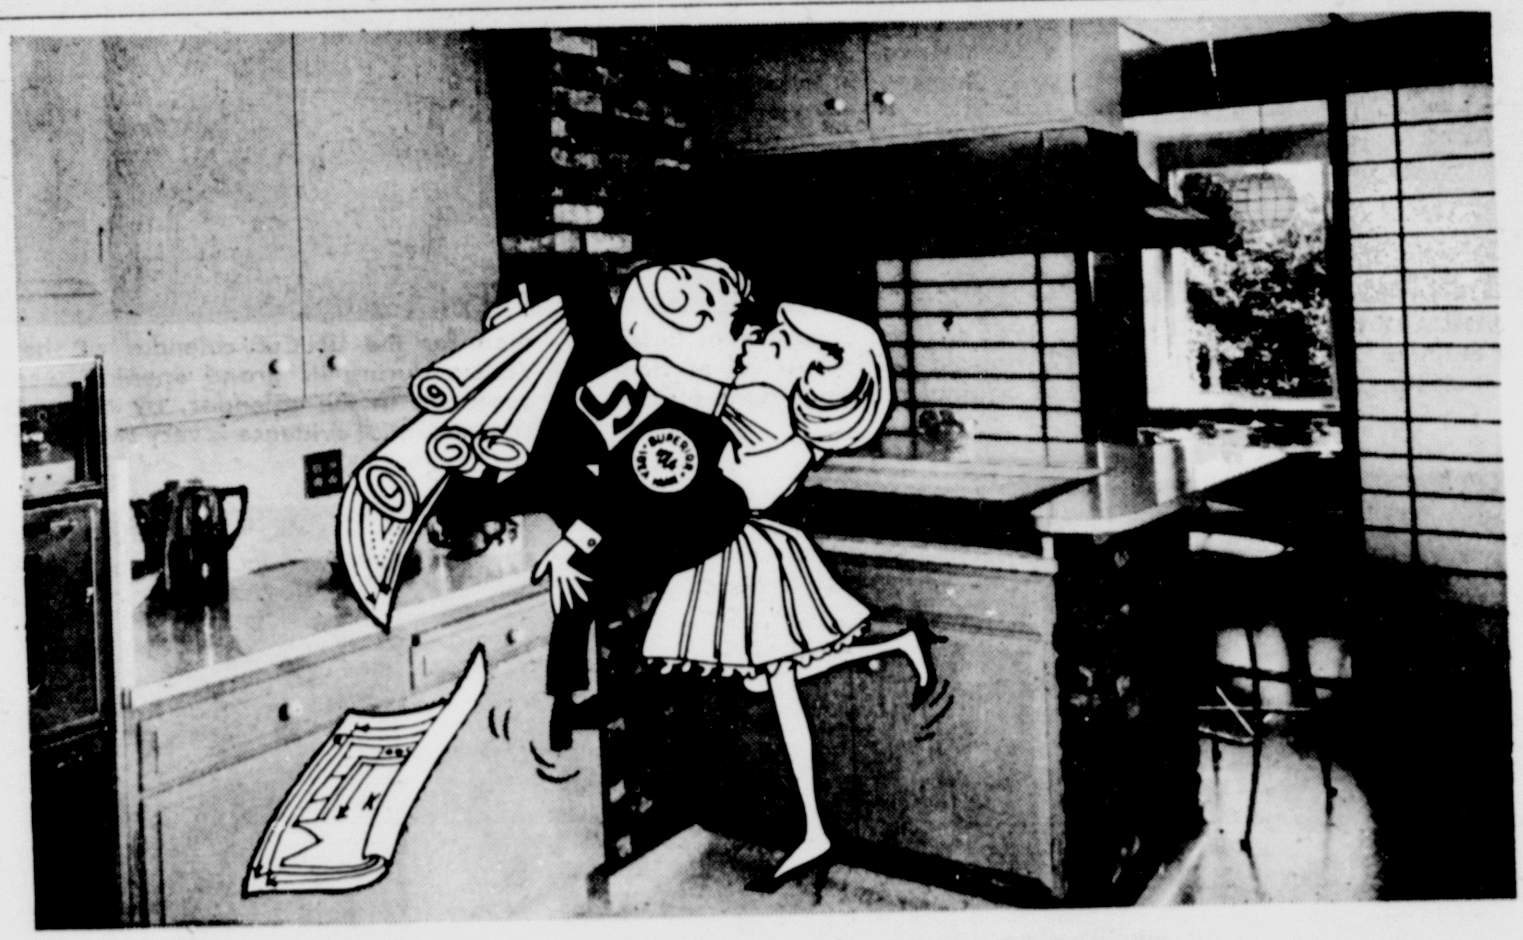

Throckmorton was to also acquire the Sausalito property rights of Steve Richardson and his sister for $5,000 in a transaction which created considerable rancor, with Richardson claiming that Throckmorton had misrepresented the indebtedness of the property, and which triggered a long series of court battles.

THROCKMORTON denied any misrepresentation, and the transaction stood.

But the son of the Saucelito Rancho grantee was to write: "We made our point, but lost our case."

OWNERSHIP OF THE Rancho Saucelito passed from the Richardson family to Samuel Throckmorton, who sold land in turn to the Sausalito Land and Ferry Co. It was then that the bayside portion of the rancho started to become a town. The company sold residential lots and established a regular ferry service that attracted permanent residents. Then came the North Pacific Coast Railroad, shown here, to bring about still more change.

THIS JANUARY ILLUSTRATION from the 1965 UNICEF Engagement Calendar is entitled "Still Life" and is by 12-year-old Suffiad Azizul of Hong Kong. It will be included in a showing of original paintings done by children for the UNICEF calendar at the Town and Country Village, Mill Valley, during its grand opening week next week. The accompanying quotation in the calendar, by Henry David Thoreau, reads: "Some circumstantial evidence is very strong, as when you find a trout in the milk."

Art From Around World

UNICEF Display Scheduled For A Marin Site

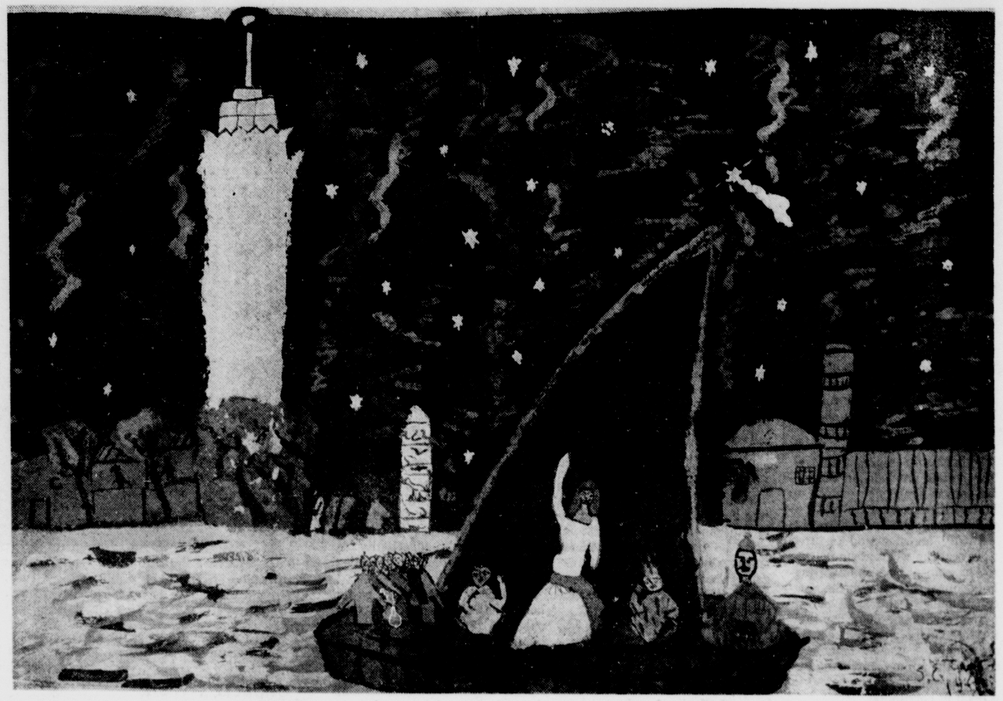

In watercolors, in collages and in oils, children from 36 countries expressed their concepts of their national cultures and of the world around them.

Their creative efforts were on behalf of the 1965 UNICEF Engagement Calendar, a project conceived by the Indian editor, artist and cartoonist, Shankar Pillai.

In one of Marin's most unusual art shows, the new Town & Country Village, Highway 101 and the Belvedere-Tiburon Turnoff, Mill Valley, will be showing more than 100 of these original paintings on loan from the K. Shankar Pillai Foundation of New Delhi, throughout next week.

The show is being conducted in conjunction with the shopping center's "grand opening week," with the art to be on display daily, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

The UNICEF calendar in which the children's work, ranging from the primitive and naive to the sophisticated, is reproduced, is already in itself something of a collector's item, since all color plates were destroyed. Marinites, however, will have an opportunity to see the originals for themselves.

"ON THE NILE" is a January illustration from the UNICEF calendar by Salwa El Garrahy, 14, of Egypt. "It traveled with them/Whilst the robe of night was one colour;/But when it became striped/I stopped to say farewell/And the morning received those stars from my hand" is the inscription from Mu'Tamid, King of Seville.

"MORNING" IS an October scene from the UNICEF calendar, by 12-year-old Mayawati Pundale of India. The anonymous quotation that accompanies the picture goes: "With every rising of the sun, think of your life as just begun." The showing of the paintings at Town & Country Village, Highway 101 at the Belvedere-Tiburon turnoff, opens Monday and continues through next Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

"FISHING" IS the title of this August scene from the UNICEF calendar, done by Milianti Michel, 13, of the Ivory Coast, French West Africa. The accompanying William Shakespeare quotation: "The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish/Cut with her golden oars the silver stream/And greedily devour the treacherous bait."

"ON THE STAGE" is by Harumi Suzuki of Japan, at 7 one of the youngest of the young artists represented in the international UNICEF Engagement Calendar. It appears in the month of September. Accompanying it are these words from William Shakespeare: "The day shall not be up so soon as I to try the fair adventure of tomorrow." Watercolors, collages and oils are among the media represented in the calendar which has already become something of a collector's item.

Our Reviewers Report

First Novel

THE VIRGIN OF SAN GIL by Paul Olsen, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 189 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

Ever since he could remember, Old Joaquin, the indio, had expected the worst of life. Treated with brutality always, spat on by the very lowest, he had accepted his lot as being born without the right to dignity.

Now nearing the end of his painful days, he comes upon the broken statue of the Virgin, from the church in his own village of San Gil. Stripped of her precious jewels, she is gouged and mutilated. But to the old man she is beautiful and he knows she has been sent to him as a sign, if he could only puzzle it out.

So begins an impressive novel. The author unwinds an absorbing tale of innocence caught up in expediency, and he does so with classic clarity and insight.

Swiftly arrested and tortured to reveal the whereabouts of the stolen jewels, Joaquin unwittingly becomes the focus in the power struggle of the local priest, mayor and police chief. As they fail to beat the answer out if the old man, the uneasy collaboration of the village forces sways and totters, threatening to fall in a flood of corruption.

But of prime importance to Joaquin, and to the reader, is his own struggle to interpret the Virgin's appearance, and for the first time in his life triumph over his own nature. A secondary struggle is that of an ignorant young aristocrat priest who unexpectedly finds saintliness in his battle with the bewildering cynicism of his senior priest.

Olsen's knowledge of the life of a Mexican peon is spurious, obviously, but that is beside the point. His Mexican locale is only a stage setting of a morality play—the age-old war of good and evil in the human heart. He brings it off beautifully in a brilliant first performance.

Youth Gangs

THE WARRIORS by Sol Yurick, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 189 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

If anyone wondered about the inner workings of a big city youth gang or the motivations of its members, Yurick has the answer.

In a brutally realistic account of a youth gang convention in New York City, its prologue and aftermath, he chills the uninitiated with a cold, hard look at violence.

A former Department of Welfare worker, Yurick wisely avoids the jargon and outlook of the professional social worker, to lay his story on the line.

It seems impossible for him to have written his story without having a pipeline to the gangs; for it rings with authenticity.

The leaders and their warriors who protect their "turf" are portrayed in vibrant characterizations, that reveal all facets of their personalities. There is pride, loyalty, fear, bravado, brutality, hate and despair rampant among gang members.

To borrow a phrase from politics, they are outside the mainstream of society, and therefore society becomes their enemy.

Yurick shows how a youth who has little to look forward to in life can feel like a big man when he has a weapon and is on his way to a rumble with his gang. Above all, he gains a sense of belonging that he can find nowhere else.

Village Dissected

BUS STOP FOR PARIS by Robert T. Anderson and Barbara Gallatin Anderson, Doubleday, 303 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

The Andersons, who formerly studied a Danish village in depth, have now turned their socio - anthropological attention to a French village on the outskirts of Paris.

The husband and wife lived in the little village of Wissous, near Orly, primarily an agricultural area for hundreds of years and only recently linked closely enough with Paris for practical commuting by city workers.

The Andersons, on the Mills College faculty, studied the community several years ago, carefully searching through the town's records and church proceedings and interviewing the old-timers.

The result is a rather interesting if quite academically factual report on the little village and its institutions, showing how little change revolution and wars actually made in the village life until the last few decades, when bus and train transportation became sufficient to link the settlement with Paris, and a few factories were established. Electricity and sanitation came to most village homes not many years ago, and life remains on a simplified, family oriented vein, they found.

The Andersons report in a scholarly, orderly way, with no dramatization, and their work is documented throughout.

Commission Report

AMERICAN WOMEN — The Report of the President's Commission on the Status of Women and Other Publications of the Commission, edited by Margaret Mead and Frances Balgley Kaplan, Scribner's, 274 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

On Dec. 14, 1961, John F. Kennedy established the President's Commission on the Status of Women.

The purpose of this commission was to investigate and recommend action to insure every women's opportunity to develop her potential capacities to the maximum.

With Eleanor Roosevelt as its head, the commission was composed of 20 members appointed by the President "from among persons with a competency in the area of public affairs and women's activities. In addition, the secretary of labor, the attorney general, the secretary of health, education and welfare, the secretary of commerce, the secretary of agriculture, and the chairman of the Civil Service Commission."

In this volume we are presented with not only the commission's report, presented on Oct. 1, 1963, but also reports from individual committees because commission and committees did not always agree.

An introduction and epilogue written by Margaret Mead, the distinguished anthropologist, give us good orientation for these findings and suggest creative direction for further thought and action in this field.

Unlike some recent half-baked sensational books so popular with would-be feminists, this book has much to offer of interest to both sexes.

Where From ESP?

EXTRASENSORY PERCEPTION OF PERFECTED HUMAN-LIKE SOCIETY ON OTHER, OLDER PLANETS by Irvin Askine, Colton Press, 50 pages, $2. Reviewed by Robert Cadwallader.

To readers familiar with extrasensory perception, this may be a thought-provoking book.

Askine does not use references to extrasensory perception in the usual way, as in a laboratory. He quotes several Old Testament prophets and their prophesies related to events which occurred 2,000 years later. Could ESP have come from other planets (somewhere) incomprehensibly older and more advanced than ours?

The author is asking for help. He admits that he is schooled in Judeo-Christian culture only, and appeals to those of other cultures to help him with evidence of like extrasensory perception that may be contained in their literature so that he may combine it with this book to create a large assortment of information for the increasing interest in this subject.

Chaucer's Work

THE STUDENT'S COMPREHENSIVE GUIDE TO THE CANTERBURY TALES by Allan H. MacLaine, Barron's Educational Series, 300 pages, softcover, $2.45. Reviewed by Jean Langham.

In the opinion of Aldous Huxley, we have suffered unjustly from the fact that the English language was in such a primitive stage in Chaucer's time.

He said: "We wouldn't have the sort of Platonic mania—separating mind from body and spirit from matter." And anyone who has roared with laughter at the "Wife of Bathe's Tale" as presented by an enthusiastic teacher cannot help but agree. As man has increased in self-consciousness, he unfortunately has diminished in exuberance.

At any rate, here is a new outline for the study of Chaucer with a tremendous amount of painstaking research and organization behind it. All previous criticism has been documented along with glossaries and summaries for each tale.

It is a most valuable companion for the serious student and a handy aid for the rest of us at exam time.

The Human Abe

HERNDON'S LIFE OF LINCOLN by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik, with introduction and notes by Paul M. Angle, Fawcett, 472 pages, paperback, 95 cents. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The "Life of Lincoln" written by his longtime law partner, William H. Herndon, has long been depended on heavily for a picture of Abraham Lincoln's years as an Illinois lawyer and politician. Paul M. Angle, a leading Lincoln authority, has evaluated Herndon's effort in a long introduction to Fawcett's paperback edition, and has copiously annotated the text.

Herndon's "life" falls short in many ways as critical biography. But it presents a human picture of Lincoln — as seen through the eyes of Herndon — that helps in understanding the strange, brilliant man who was the United States' 16th President.

Angle's introduction and notes add greatly to the original text in this paperback edition.

Coming Author

THE PEACOCK'S TAIL by Edward Hoagland, McGraw-Hill, 257 pages, $5.50. Reviewed by Jean Langham.

A young man of upper middle-class background with an inclination toward poetry loses his girl and moves into a Harlem welfare hotel. The several days and nights of his upheaval are described as he moves between his old friends and new acquaintances in an effort to assuage his grief.

Within this framework, Edward Hoagland has constructed a colorful and vibrant study of some of the social perplexities confronting the average nice guy in this day and age.

Banal as this summary may seem, the book is in no way dull or pompous. It seethes with all the action and color of the people and streets of New York (displaced Easterners will soak luxuriously in each page). The Aspinwall Hotel exists completely, and "the other" New York and New Yorkers, too, are sharply and originally drawn.

Edward Hoagland is unmistakably a coming author. This is his third novel, and in it he displays a firm grasp of his talents and a sure touch with the form of the novel. The book glitters, vibrates and glows with his love for language, yet he writes economically and never employs a useless word or paragraph.

His characterizations are powerful and complete, particularly those of the children who are the most touching people in the book and its most important symbol.

Were more novels of this caliber produced, the state of modern fiction would not be in such sorry shape.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE POWDER BARREL by William Haggard, Ives Washburn, 184 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Still the torrent of spy fiction books continues unabated.

If you can digest yet another, this is a good one. Haggard, a veteran, is one of the best in the field, much under-rated.

"The Powder Barrel" takes place in an Arabic shaikhdom, small and unimportant—except that it is a key link in Great Britain's vital Middle Eastern oil supply system.

For that reason, there are those interested in stirring up trouble. British political and security leaders and their agents are determined to prevent that at all costs. In this, they gain some surprising allies.

Haggard deals with some interesting, believable characters, plots extremely well, and moves his story along at a fast pace, all the time writing with a bit of that British "tongue in cheek" that is so well suited to the spy novel.

A Story Of The Hardy People Who Mine The Coal In Wales

By DON KEOWN

For those of us whose ancestors came from Wales, Joyce Varney's "A Welsh Story" is certain to hold a special fascination.

But regardless of ethnic ties, just about everyone should enjoy this beautifully written autobiography of one young girl who grew up in the strange blend of beauty and ugliness that is the Welsh coal mining country.

While it is Joyce Varney's own story, told in an intensely personal manner, she does not permit herself to overshadow the chief reason for the book, which is the insight it offers into the Welsh way of life.

Daughter of a charming but ne'er-do-well father who was killed in a mine mishap even before her birth, and of an embittered and disillusioned mother who then had to go to work as a servant woman, little Joyce was reared by her maternal grandparents.

Fortunately for her, those grandparents were people hewn from the finest Welsh stock. They were poor people who periodically became still poorer. But so warmhearted were they that the child Joyce seldom noticed the absence of fuel for the fireplace, or the availability of only the simplest foods.

As Joyce tells her story, she also tells the story of the Welsh people — of recurring hard times, of dangerous occupations in the treacherous mine shafts, of shocking child labor, of severity and hardship. But there were also close family relationships, a love for music and nature, an appreciation of those few blessings that fell their way, and the courage to meet and do battle with life's problems.

A WELSH STORY by Joyce Varney, Bobbs - Merrill, 313 pages, $4.95.

THROW by Anthony Bloomfield, Charles Scribner's Sons, 283 pages, $4.50.

Joyce herself did battle in her determination to escape the drudgery of a servant's life. She escaped first to wartime nurse's training, then to the United States as the wife of an American serviceman.

She has been a newspaper editor and a magazine writer. The lyric quality of her writing as she tells of her first romance that ended in tragedy, or of the affectionate bonds which held her family together, is the kind so often associated with the more gifted Welsh and Irish. There's a definite lilt to the lines. And there is a great deal of inspiration to be gained from this story about a tough and admirable people who face adversity with a stubborn determination that they will not be beaten down.

ENGLISH NOVELIST Anthony Bloomfield has written an impressive and disturbing study of a case history in obsessive irrationality in his just-published "Throw."

Everyone has cleared the driver of the car that killed his small son of blame except Harold Makepiece.

Makepiece, a middle-aged and respectable clerk, has nursed his hurt and hatred until it is ready to explode into a rage for revenge. Then one day a chance sighting of the death car driver sets the fuse to burning.

Makepiece finds himself less and less able to control his compulsion for vengeance. He begins with petty acts — a brick thrown through the window, telephone calls. But his actions become increasingly serious in their consequences and repercussions. He is fully cognizant that he is traveling a path that is likely to bring disaster down upon his own head, as well as that of his victim. But he is unable to stop or to turn aside, and finally his campaign of persecution carries him over the brink into committing man's most terrible of crimes.

It is apparent that more than the tragedy he has experienced lies behind Makepiece's commitment to self-destruction. There is something reflected in him of all mankind's increasing tendency to lose its contact with reality—to jealously foster its prejudices and its hatreds that corrode so relentlessly.

Bloomfield's book is given added impact in that it is not without compassion for its chief character as he gropes with the obsession that is destroying his marriage, his career, his very life. And the somber theme is relieved by touches of wry humor and by the fascinating revelations it offers of the troubled human mind.

Bloomfield has written an utterly convincing study of irrationality — not an easy accomplishment. His by now well recognized narrative skill is evident. So is his special understanding of the human being in torment.

The result is one of the best novels of an even duller than usual summer publishing season.

ANTHONY BLOOMFIELD, a British novelist of growing stature, is the author of a new work of fiction entitled "Throw," published by Charles Scribner's Sons.

PHILOSOPHICAL Library has published "Karl Marx Dictionary," edited by Morris Stockhammer, presenting the views of the founder of Marxist theory as arranged in alphabetical order by the subject—abolition of property, accumulation of capital, avarice, banking system, etc. The reference work, selling for $6, includes key extracts from "Das Kapital," of course, but also additional excerpts from Marx's other writings.

MARINITES, with San Quentin Prison in their home county, should be interested in the new University of California Press book, "Crime and its Correction: An International Survey of Attitudes and Practices," by John Conrad, with the California Department of Corrections and Youth Authority for 18 years. The author has investigated correctional procedures in a number of countries.

FOR THE housewife: Popular Library and The Maytag Co. have cooperated in publishing as a paperback "The Maytag Encyclopedia of Home Laundry," billed as "a completely authoritative guide to doing the family wash, buying automatic washers and dryers, washable fabrics, a modern laundry center for your home."

It's available for 50 cents in bookstores or directly from: Encyclopedia, The Maytag Co., Newton, Iowa, 50208.

For The Junior Reader

Some new reading for the juniors:

American Heritage has reached back fewer years than usual for most of the material in its most recent volume in its excellent Junior Library series for young history buffs. "Americans in Space" ($3.95) is authored by foreign correspondent John Dille with Philip S. Hopkins, retired director of the National Air Museum at the Smithsonian Institution, as consultant. There are introductory chapters on man's earliest interest in space and the first pioneer efforts at its exploration with special attention to Robert Goddard. But the main part of the book begins with Russia's launching of Sputnik I and follow through the 22-orbit flight by Gordon Cooper that concluded the U.S. Mercury series. One hundred and thirty-six illustrations, 48 of them in color, supplement the excellent text, easily comprehended by young readers.

"A Father Reads to His Children" (Dutton, $5.95) is an anthology of prose and poetry, selected, edited and introduced by New York Times book reviewer Orville Prescott. It opens with Hans Christian Andersen's "The Emperor's New Clothes" and closes with a poem by James Elroy Flecker. In between appear the work, most but not all of it familiar, of the likes of Keats, Steinbeck, Dickens, Macaulay, the Brothers Grimm, Goldsmith, Hawthorne, Blake, Shakespeare, Tennyson, Steffens and the Bible, plus many others —24 stories and 24 poems in all. It is Prescott's hope that fathers will find his choices especially suited for reading aloud to their offspring, and thus help to foster love of good writing in their children. It is, indeed, a treasury.

In "The White Calf" by Cliff Faulknor, illustrated by Gerald Tailfeathers (Little Brown, $3.75), Eagle Child finds a white buffalo calf and brings it home. And thereby hangs the tale of how the small Indian boy, with the help of an old mare, keeps the white animal alive. And it is the story of the Blackfoot culture and their struggle against a sometimes hostile surrounding. This prize-winning tale is suitable for about the fourth grade reader, and may interest boys more than girls.

How is the Cinderella story told in Italy? You'll find out in "Favorite Fairy Tales Told in Italy" by Virginia Haviland, illustrated by Evaline Ness (Little Brown, $2.95). Also there is the Italian version of the three pigs in "The Three Goslings." The illustrations are large and beautiful and the print is big and easy to read; suitable for second graders and older.

There really aren't any sea serpents. Or are there? It's easy to see that they exist in "The Sea Serpents Around Us," written and illustrated by Lois and Louis Darling (Little Brown, $3.50). This is a lavishly illustrated book that would be fun for a parent or parents to read along with their child or children.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

STOMPS AND JOYS — Jelly Roll Morton — RCA Victor Vintage Series—LPV-508:

This great jazz innovator took the original sounds of New Orleans and worked them into his very own way of playing piano and leading small combos.

Jelly Roll is remembered as one of the character supreme of the jazz world of the past—the stories about this amazing man seem to be endless. Lest some think him to be only legend and not accomplished fact, musically speaking, this record should convince otherwise.

The dates of the recording sessions are 1928 through 1930, and the richness of musical detail and harmony is truly on a par with the work of such innovators as Duke Ellington of the same period. The tune title are pure Jelly Roll — "Seattle Hunch," "Mushmouth Shuffle," "Primrose Stomp," etc.

Morton's instrumentation is especially interesting and immediately gives his creations a sound apart from that of more New Orleans music. In addition to his own raggy piano work, there is much clarinet, tuba, and also a fine rhythm section.

Sound is very good.

BECHET OF NEW ORLEANS: A Jazz Pioneer—Sidney Bechet —RCA Victor Vintage Series—LPV-510:

One of America's earliest and greatest jazz virtuosi has been dead about five years now, but his unique recordings will continue to live in the hearts of his fans throughout the world.

The soprano saxophone has never since had a champion the likes of Bechet—he could make the smooth and sophisticated-sounding sax do anything he wanted it to, although he was completely self-taught.

Conductor Ernest Ansermet recognized Bechet's great talent as early as 1919. These Victor re-releases range in date from 1932 to 1941 and are mostly by Sidney Bechet and his New Orleans Feetwarmers. There are 16 tracks all told, many made available here for the first time on lp.

Some of the goodies are "I Thought I Heard Buddy Bolden Say," "Muskrat Ramble," and "The Sheik of Araby."

THE IMMORTAL CLIFFORD BROWN—Limelight Stereo LS 2-8601:

This is the first release in a new recording venture launched by the Mercury-Philips-Fontana people in Chicago.

Here are 15 mostly lengthy tracks on two discs, by the 25-year-old trumpet player who was killed in an auto accident in 1956. The album notes contain statements by several great jazz artists to the effect that Brown should be rated with such names as Miles, Diz and Fats, even though he was cut down in the formative stages of his career.

His trumpet tone is silky and smooth and flowing.

In this album, he appears with vocalists Dinah Washington and Sarah Vaughan, with the Max Roach group, and in selections from an album with strings. The electronic enhancement for stereo of the original mono recordings seems quite convincing.

SONG FOR A YOUNG FELLOW

on a peppermint bar.
Where the end is out of sight and a fellow can raise a fist at things as they exist.

Or, should ought to be when a fellow skids off this planet's speedway free.

What's going on at the end of the peppermint bar that sticks out in space is for us to guess.

For 'tis no simple thought
one can 'ere express—
Y'see, it's pure vacuum around and about the end of a peppermint bar and his lonely, lovely star.

THE TIDEWATER, shown in the sketch at right with the floor plan below, is a 700-square-foot vacation home that can be built on virtually any site. It is one of 21 original vacation homes designed by architect Robert Martin Engelbrecht and featured in a recent Vacation Homes Plan and Products Guide insert sponsored by Simpson Timber Co. in Building Products Guide. Copies can be obtained by sending $1.25 to Building Products Guide, 175 South San Antonio Road, Los Angeles, if the Guide is not available at your newsstand or bookstore. The Tidewater shown here has a spacious redwood deck that surrounds the compact living area, creating an open pavilion effect. You step from the deck into the living area of the house which has a distinctive, high-peaked room in the center with a cluster of skywindows for lighting and warmth. The four glass and sliding door entry walls can be covered by heavy duty sliding plywood panels for protection against bad weather.

To Harmonize Lawn With Patio, Build This Bench

A paved patio and a lawn make awkward partners unless they're joined gracefully.

What's needed is a change of pace at the edge of the paving so that masonry and grass don't meet head-on.

Simple but effective is to build an L-shaped bench in one corner of the patio. The bench will provide a change of elevation, giving a bit of height in one spot.

The bench seat can be built of Douglas fir or white fir two-by-three-inch lumber on edge, leaving an eight-inch spacing between. For legs and cross supports, cut fence posts to the desired height and length.

Then, to finish the project, work a moulded planting bed along another edge of the patio, perhaps using a pair of garden screens in the bed as a backdrop for plantings. The screens will also serve as a means of introducing vertical lines to break the flat junction of lawn and paving.

Freshen Woodwork With A Paint Job

Want to freshen up tired woodwork? Try a color treatment.

Thin flat paint in the desired color to wiping consistency and apply with a cheesecloth pad to give a glazed effect. Then finish with a coat of clear plastic varnish in a "hand rubbed" finish to give a soft sheen to the wood.

The Light Touch

by Bill Brady

When business is flat on its back, at least it's looking up . . .

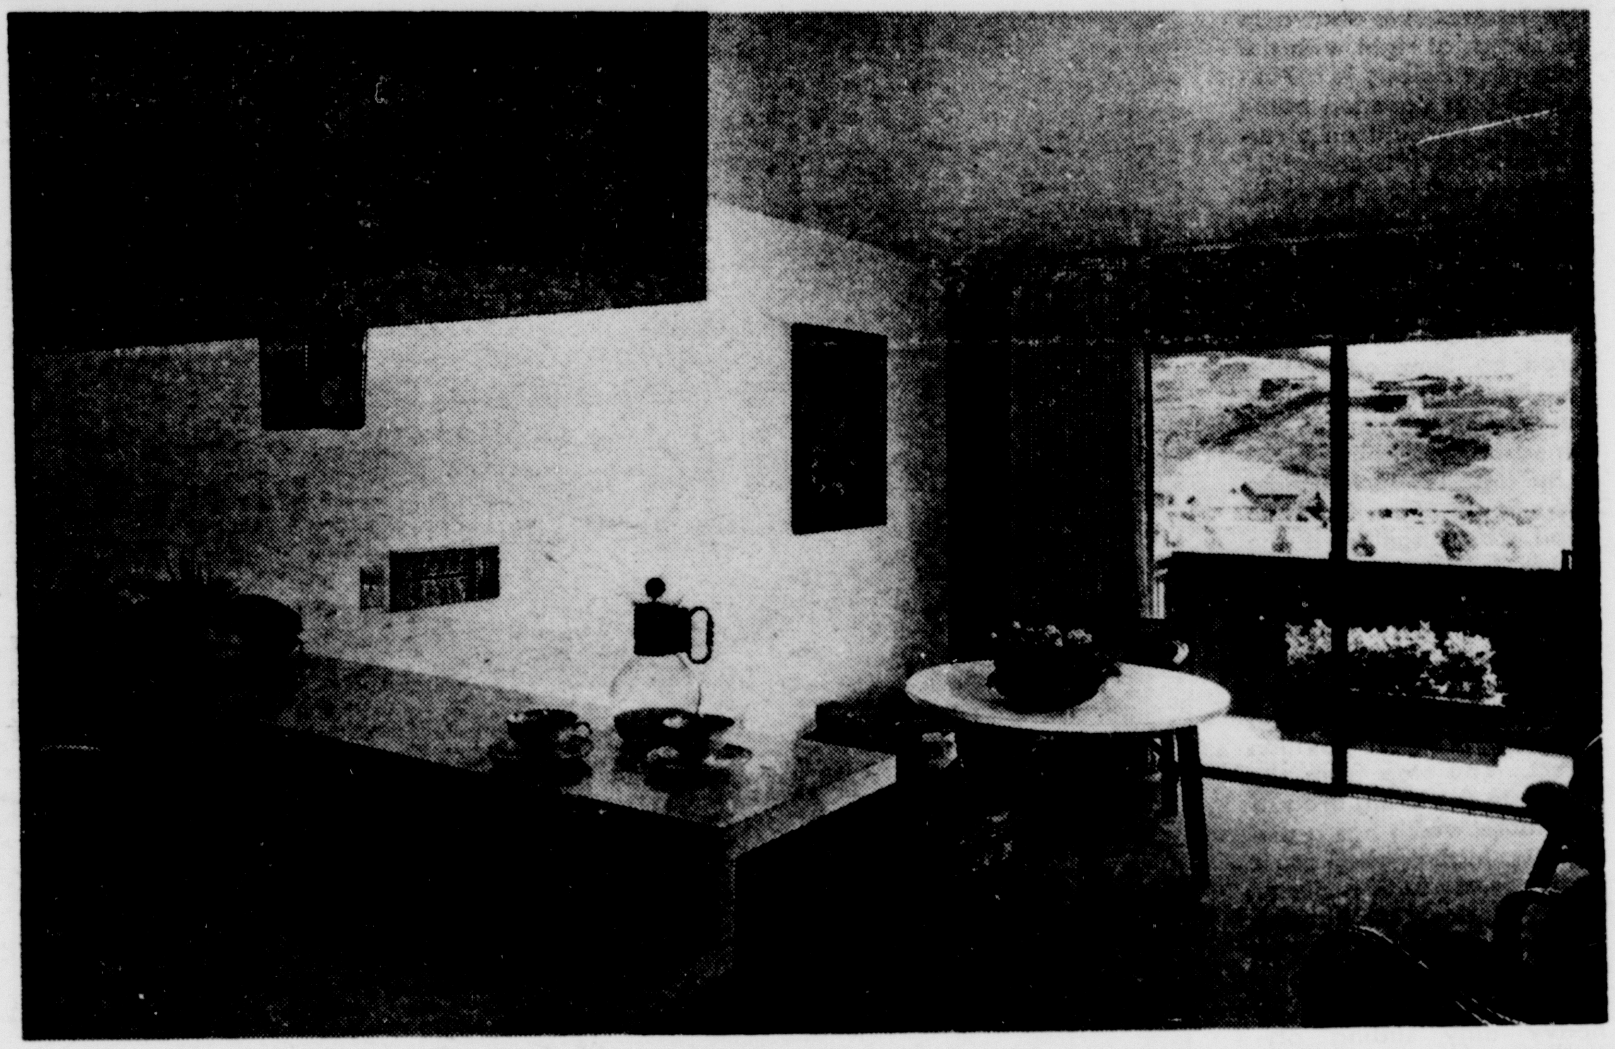

Friend of ours is so henpecked, the only time he opens his mouth is to yawn...

Blessed are those who have nothing to say, and cannot be persuaded to say it . . .

If a woman really loves a man, he can make her do anything she wants to . . .

We know some honeymooners who are blissful in their one-room apartment. After all, there's no room for complaint!

You'll have no complaint if you favor us at BRADY REALTY, 834 Fifth Ave., San Rafael, phone 453-1560, whenever you want to find an ideal home for your loved ones.

THE FAMILY room in the model at The Knoll in Peacock Gap, furnished by Beatrice Bliss Rindal, overlooks the 18-hole championship golf course and has its own private balcony. The atmosphere is cheerful and comfortable. The adjoining kitchen is streamlined for efficiency.

THERE'S A CHARMING view from the dining room of the model townhouse at The Knoll. From the balcony, one looks down into the two-story living room and to the garden and the pool beyond. Note the unusual imported Belgian glass crystal chandelier.

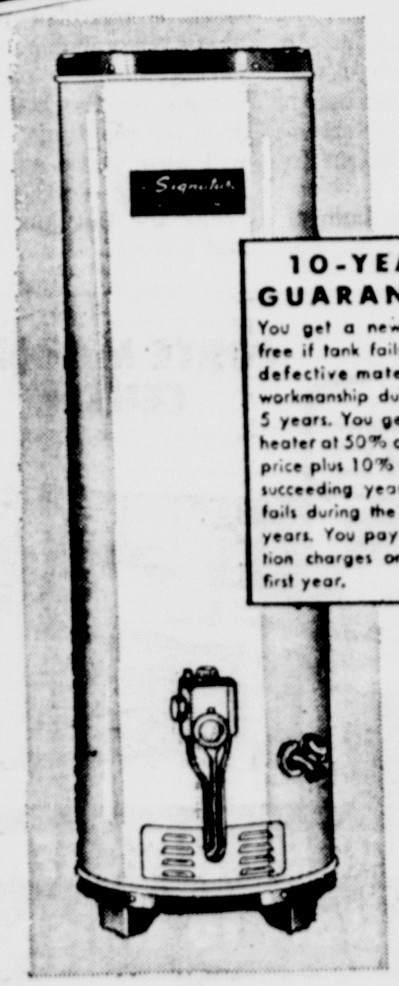

THE MASTER BEDROOM in the furnished model at The Knoll in Peacock Gap, San Rafael, is tremendous and overlooks the 175-foot pool and beautifully landscaped grounds by Royston, Hanamoto, Mayes and Beck. The complex also has a private Buckeye Club richly furnished in leathers and rich carpets and drapes for the use of all residents.

ity room for washer-dryer as well as additional ground storage, adequate for skis, baggage and miscellaneous occasionally used articles.

A FEW STEPS up is the attractive living room designed for adults. Golden tones are used in the patterned custom covered Baker sofa, henna tones in the tufted pull-up stools and gold linen-velvet in the two matching armchairs. A provincial library table is in French walnut accented by an Italian antique mirror. Old Chinese brackets add charm to the bookcase as do such accessories as an East Indian carving, Oriental art, a Florentine leather box and an antique inkstand.

Unique detail in the two-story fireplace and the view of the balcony dining room adds architectural distinction. The mirrored wet bar has old silver accessories. Lush off-white all wool carpets add warmth to the room which opens directly to the garden outside through sliding glass doors. Airy off-white linen drapes are used throughout.

The dining room, a half flight up, is finished in provincial French walnut. Chairs are upholstered in a heavy printed velvet. Victorian glass bells accent the buffet and French plaques featuring coats of arms adorn the walls. A crystal chandelier is effective.

ON THIS SAME level is a guest bath, den, kitchen and family room. In the den a floor-to-ceiling bookcase is particularly attractive. A Thomasville wing chair is in a hexter print and the important desk is a Sligh. An interesting step table by Stiffel can also serve as a stool to reach the top shelf of the bookcase.

Kitchen and family room feature a new washable wall-to-wall carpet in orange and brown tones. The vinyl wallpaper in the kitchen has a cheery pattern to complement the white formica counters. Stainless steel sink and dishwasher and all electrical appliances add efficiency and beauty.

The adjoining family room is furnished with rattan upholstered in mustard tones by California-Asia of Los Angeles. The dining-game table has a white formica top for easy care.

Another half flight up is the master bedroom and two other large-scaled bedrooms.

SURPRISE IS registered at the lavish engineered storage space in the hall, as well as the large bath which serves two bedrooms. One is furnished as a guest room featuring English period furniture, a Queen Anne highboy and desk, a double bed, a black Hitchcock desk chair and a Victorian rocker by Thonet.

The "other" bedroom has twin beds by Basic-Witz and a yellow and white quilted floral print bedspread in yellow and white. Framed old Latin music sheets add interest to the room.

The master bedroom is truly a dream. It has two small balconies overlooking the pool and garden, loads of louvred-door closets and storage and a spacious private bath.

In this room Mrs. Rindal has chosen American of Martinsville for the furniture series. A celadon green quilted velvet bedspread custom-made by Max Rawicz covers both twin beds. The French provincial nightstands are accented by Italian alabaster lamps.

THE KNOLL offers mature occupants a chance to live the same expansive life they always have without the normal chores of maintenance and upkeep. Fox & Carskadon are the exclusive sales agents.

To reach The Knoll, go out Third Street via San Pedro Road to the main entrance of Peacock Gap where signs direct drivers to the townhouses which are close to the main Peacock Gap Clubhouse on Biscayne Drive. Townhouses are open for viewing daily from noon to dusk.

Spring In January— If You Plan Ahead

If you act soon, your garden need not lack for color this winter.

The main idea is to get the plants well on their way while the days are still long enough and the weather still warm enough.

Your nurseryman has all of the important winter color varieties on display now, or will have in a couple of weeks. Here's what to look for:

Pansies and violas begin to bloom within days after you set them out. Choose mixed colors in pansies and separate colors in violas—choice of yellow, blue, apricot or white.

BOTH PANSIES and violas create startling effects in massed beds. Violas are also splendid foreground borders in front of taller annuals.

Would you like some cut flowers for the house, in addition to winter color in the garden? Try winter stock or snapdragons.

Winter stock are generally massed as separate colors in shades of yellow, blue, pink, red or white. Snapdragons are used in mixed colors generally, but some kinds and colors are available separately. You have your choice of soft pastels in medium-height plants or well-defined "sharp" colors in the taller growing rocket strain.

FOR INTERMEDIATE height, use the versatile calendulas in shades of yellow, gold and apricot. There is nothing better in the garden (or in the house) to brighten a drab winter day. Use them as a foreground border if your space is limited, otherwise mass them in sunny beds.

Does your taste run to dainty flowers? Then the Fairy Primroses are for you! The airy spikes of pink, red, lavender or white flowers are best described as "charming."

This popular winter-flowering subject is treated as an annual —not to be confused with the spring-blooming perennial English primrose with the larger flowers. The Fairy Primroses, like violas, pansies and calendulas, lend themselves perfectly to either borders or mass planting. Your nurseryman recommends using them as straight colors—not mixed.

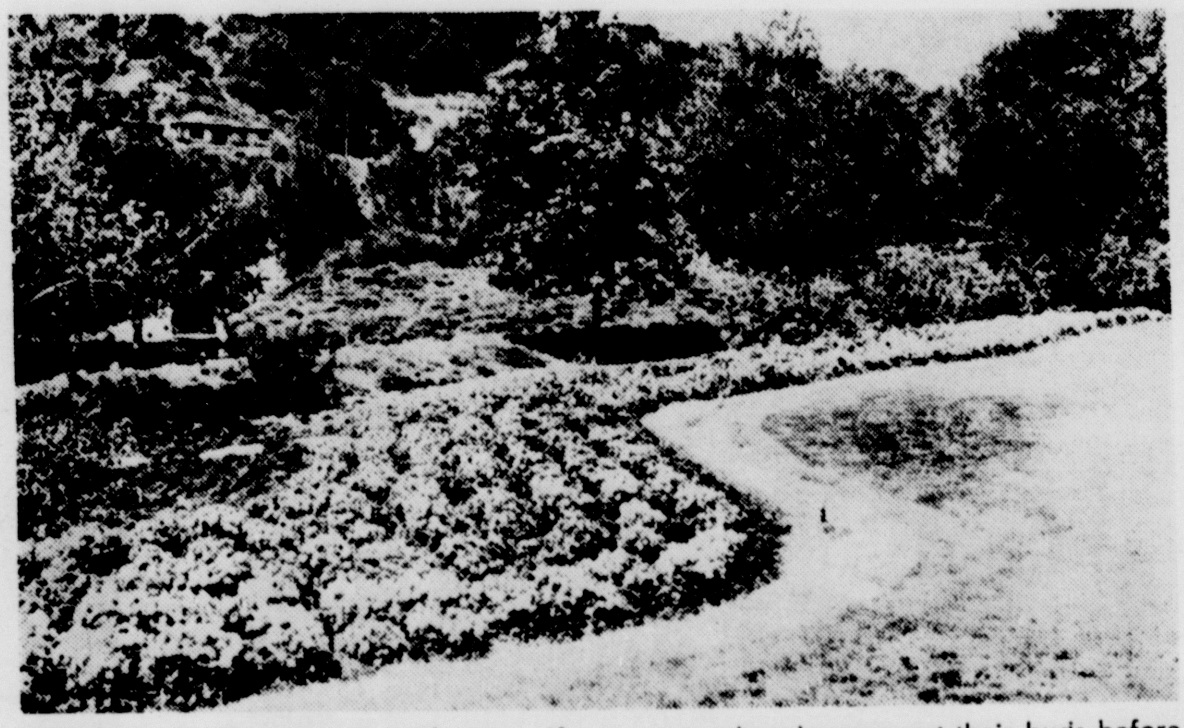

HOW ABOUT some sweet peas, for winter cut flowers? Most nurseries have seedlings growing in plant bands, as well as nets on which to train your plants. If you are a "start-from-scratch" type gardener you may wish to begin with the fresh seed on racks in the nursery now.

For color in shade, some gardeners use cinerarias. Two distinct types are available—the "stellata" make large plants loaded with medium-sized flowers, excellent for distant viewing. The dwarf "grandifloras" produce clusters of large individual flowers on smaller plants and these are desired for close-up viewing.

Whatever your choice, keep in mind that soil preparation has a great deal to do with a successful planting. Work the beds to a depth of a foot, incorporating at the same time soil amendment recommended by your nurseryman — which may be steer manure, redwood compost, peat moss or similar material.

RAKE THE beds smooth and set in the plants with as much soil from the flat as possible. A putty knife is a good tool for this purpose. Firm the plants into the soil and water with a soft stream from your hose immediately. Spread snail and slug pellets at once.

A week after planting you can apply a mild liquid food solution. Feed again in a month and spread fresh snail pellets frequently.

YOU CAN HAVE spring in mid-winter if you start setting out cool weather annuals. Pansies, violas, stock, snapdragons, calendulas and fairy primroses will all be showing up at the nurseries. The important thing is to give them a long growing season so that they can set their buds before the temperature begins to drop. Mass in as borders as above, or tuck them into pots, boxes and planting squares close to the house. (Photo courtesy of California Assn. of Nurserymen)

There Are Some Summer Pruning Chores To Be Done

It's true that the bulk of pruning is done during the fall and winter — and that they are regarded as the traditional seasons to wield the pruning shears.

But the plain fact is that plants grow so fast here in the West that many of them need summer trimming in order to keep them in bounds or to insure proper crop production for the following year. That's the word from the experts at the Wiss Educational Pruning Institute.

ANYONE WHO enjoys a good lively green hedge, already knows how important it is to trim regularly through the growing season. Hedges, whether the common, fast-growing privet or the slow-growing aristocratic English holly, will need regular "haircuts" during the year to keep neat looking at all times.

Surprisingly, roses appreciate summer pruning too. After the main crops bloom out, trim back lightly.

The idea is to leave about three sets of leaves to provide foliage for the new growth and for the buds to set up new flowering stems. This enables you to enjoy roses over a period of seven to nine months.

THE REAL serious job of pruning roses is done, of course, in January. The Wiss people point out that most of the modern hybrid tea roses, if pruned on the heavy side each year in January, can produce productive frameworks year after year so that the same plants will last for 25 years or more.

Although this is a good time to prune overgrown shrubs in order to develop nice new foliage before autumn rolls around, this is not the right time to prune any of the shrubs which bloom in the spring. Right now the new bloom buds for the spring of 1966 are forming and you'd cut them off.

This is the one pruning "don't" from Wiss.

ESPALIER FRUIT trees are not as widely grown as they used to be. But for those lucky green thumbers who still have them, this is the time to trim back new growth which may have reached a length of 10 or 12 inches. It should be shortened back to about three buds, the fat little protuberances on opposite sides of the stem.

Pruning right now encourages the formation of the fruiting spurs.

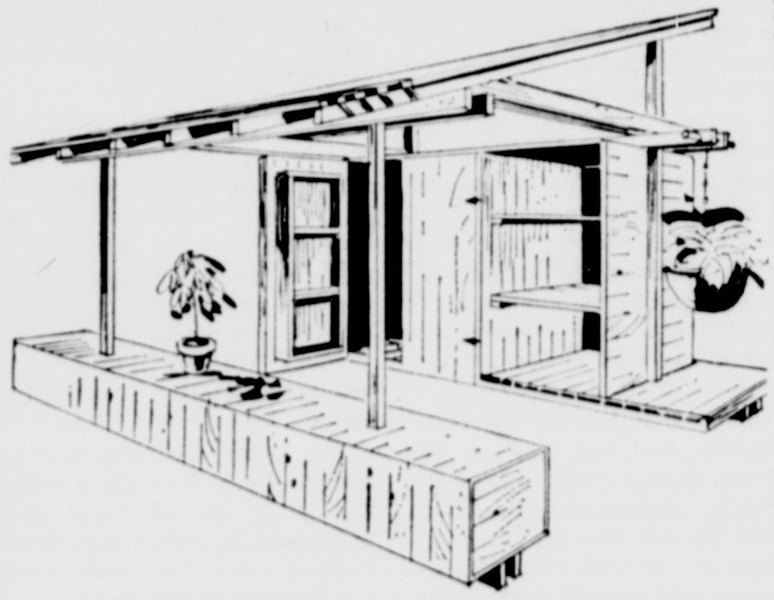

Tasty cane berries are being enjoyed by many now. But it won't be long before they finish production for this year. This means such popular types of berries as boysenberries, blackberries, raspberries and others of this class.

THE IDEA IS to cut the canes now—the ones that are bearing the fruit these days—clear back to the ground. Then you start the job of training the new growth that is already three to five feet long to take their places. It helps the plants if you irrigate them heavily and apply a good plant food.

At first signs of mites—and these can be troublesome on the berries—load the hose-powered spray gun with a good all-purpose spray mix and spray for three weekends in succession. This usually knocks out the infestations.

Artichoke clumps — if you're lucky enough to have a few — can stand a little summer pruning too. They begin to look on the shabby side now that the summer crop is finished. Get rid of the old foliage by cutting it back to the ground level and encourage the new "sucker" growth which is already beginning to appear at the ground level.

The wonderful old Italian gardeners who used to grow them in the cool foggy sections of the Bay Area, always achieved extra growth by regular feeding and watering as soon as they did their summer "pruning" job.

HOUSES HAVE storage centers, so why not gardens? Here's one designed to organize all garden tools in one handsome, compact structure. For plans of this unit, as well as for other garden storage areas, write to Outdoor Storage Center, Department 508-P, Western Wood Products Assn., Yeon Building, Portland, Ore. Enclose five centers to cover handling and postage.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔ Much of the success of the annuals, perennials and bulbs you will be setting out next month depends on how well your soil is prepared. Get a head start on difficult areas by thoroughly tilling the soil and adding generous amounts of organic material.

✔ Stake tuberous begonias to support heavy flowers and stems.

✔ You may set out sub-tropicals now, but do not feed them at this time.

✔ Set out annual fill-ins to make sure you have continued color in your borders. Check with your nurseryman on which ones should go in the ground. He will have them started in bedding plant flats.

✔ Watering is still your main job. Maintain moisture content in fuchsias, begonias, azaleas and camellias, and deep water at regular intervals, with dry intervals between, lawns, flower borders and vegetables.

✔ Keep fallen leaves raked so that they do not smother the grass and deny the lawn needed sunshine.

WEEKEND SHOWS

The New Campus Fashions

Back-to-school clothes from Macy's will be shown in a fashion show on KGO-TV Sunday at 2 p.m.

The repeat program, first seen Thursday evening, features Sally Field, star of the upcoming ABC-TV "Gidget series," and 10 young San Francisco models.

All channels plan frequent brief reports on the progress of the Gemini-Titan space flight throughout the weekend.

Also worthy of your attention this weekend:

SATURDAY: Singers Sergio Franchi and Linda Bennett, the teen-age Ronettes, saxophonist George Young and the folk singing Highwaymen join Al Hirt on his "Fanfare" show (KPIX, 7:30 p.m.).

Tony Randall hosts the likes of Nelson Eddy, Gale Sherwood, Allan Sherman, the Supremes and Vikki Carr on a repeat "The Hollywood Palace" bill (KGO, 9:30 p.m.).

Rock 'n' rollers on "Hollywood a Go Go" include Chad & Jeremy, P. J. Proby, Gene McDaniels, Brian Hyland, Canibal and the Headhunters and Dobie Gray (KGO, 6:30 p.m.).

Most promising of the Saturday night movies are two sagas built around disasters at sea — "The Last Voyage" with Dorothy Malone, George Sanders, Robert Stack and Edmond O'Brien (KRON, 9 p.m.) and "Down to the Sea in Ships" with Richard Widmark and Lionel Barrymore (KGO, 11:15 p.m.).

"Dodge City" is a 1939 vintage western with Errol Flynn (KPIX, 11:20 p.m.).

"Wide World of Sports" offers coverage of the National AAU Men's Outdoor Swimming and Diving Championships, plus skateboarding (KGO, 5 p.m.).

Actor Hal March and comedian Bill Cosby are the guest celebrities on Jim Lange's word game show, "Oh, My Word!" (KGO, 10:30 p.m.).

Singer Anita Bryant appears on "The Lawrence Welk Show" (KGO, 8:30 p.m.).

SUNDAY: Sports fans can watch the San Francisco 49ers in action as they take on the Dallas Cowboys in a National Football League exhibition from Portland, Ore. (KPIX, 10 a.m.).

The Carling World Golf Championship, being played in Sutton, Mass., will also be covered (KPIX, 1 p.m.).

"Issues and Answers" presents a discussion of the Gemini-Titan 5 space project by Gen. Bernard Schriever, in charge of the development of all new U.S. rockets (KGO, 1:30 p.m.).

The "Camera Three," repeat is a program of exceptional merit, featuring the contemporary counterparts of The Hutchinson Family Singers, Abraham Lincoln's campaign vocalists, in music of Abe's time. (KPIX, 9 a.m.).

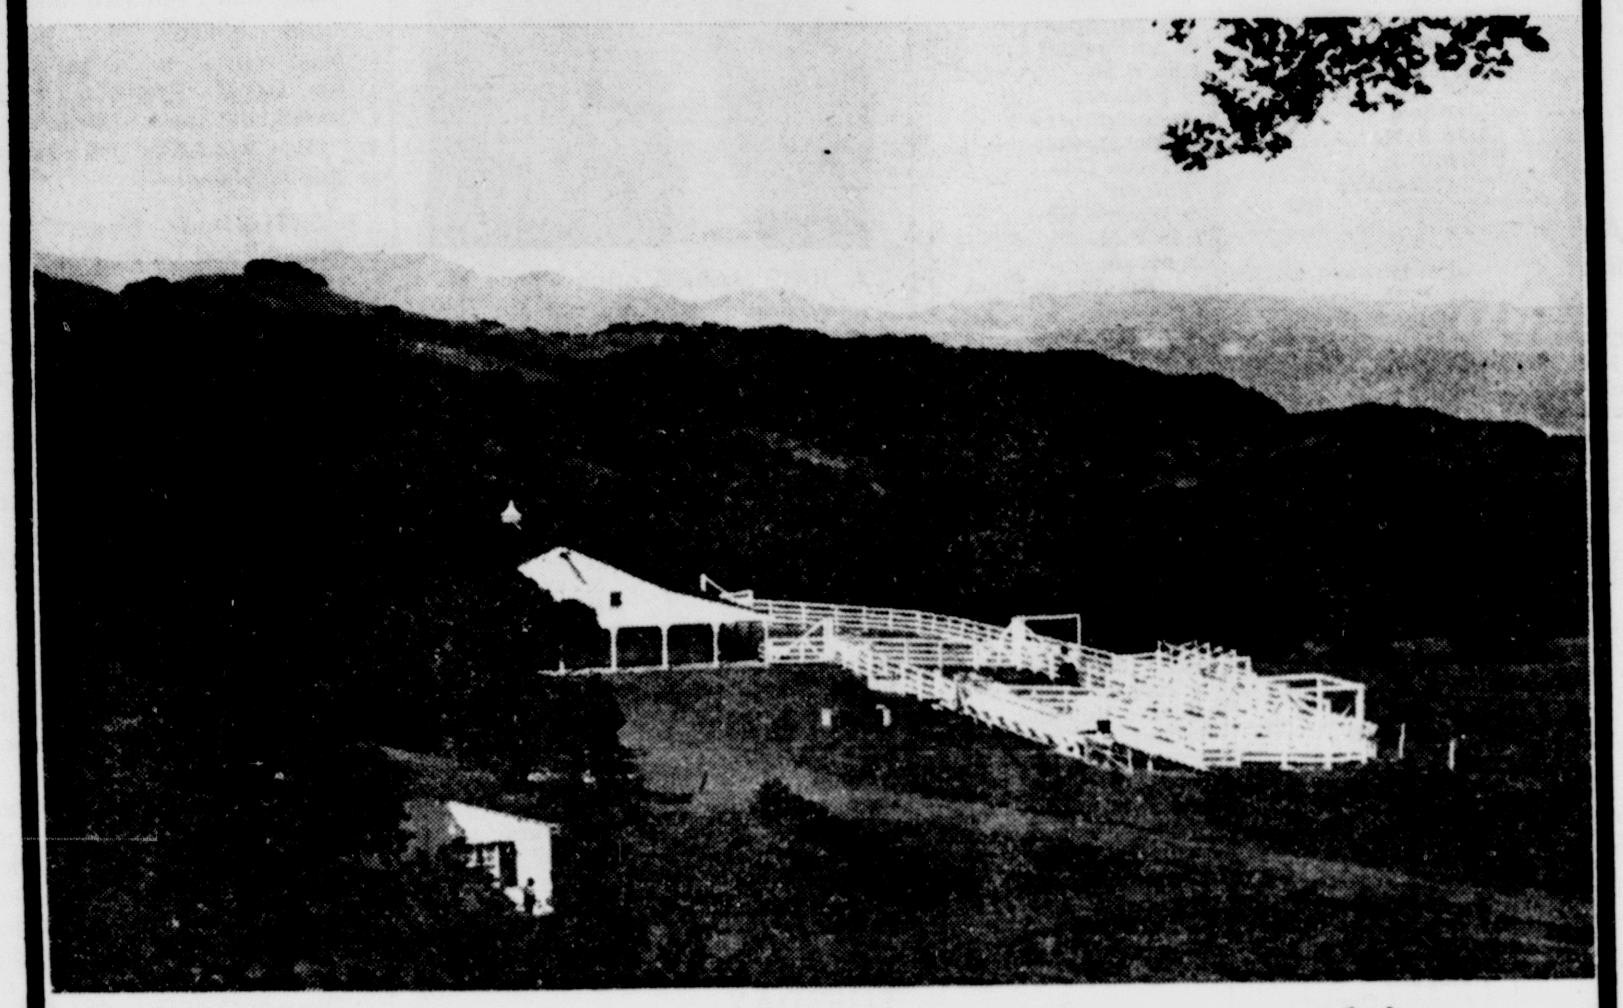

Walter Shenson, producer of the Beatle movies "A Hard Day's Night" and "Help!," will talk with Rolfe Peterson on "POW" (KPIX, 3 p.m.).

Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony in Wagner's

DIAMOND A RANCH

Ride Away To The Valley of the Moon

Each homeowner may stable a horse on his own "ranch," or at the Diamond A Corral.

Imagine riding over the 18 miles of riding trails, visiting the pond, the waterfall, the fishing lake, or swimming in the community pool. Would you like to relax on the veranda and watch the lights come up in the towns nearby, and be hypnotized by the beacons from the airport and the towers of the Golden Gate Bridge.

Estate size building lots, in a setting of trees, rolling hills; sprinkled with live streams and lush green ground cover. The perfect background for the home you've always dreamed of, in an area of other fine homes. All just 55 minutes from the heart of San Francisco—an island of solitude mere minutes from the cities of Sonoma, Santa Rosa, and the Sonoma Golf and Country Club.

Lots from 1½ to 2½ acres

Priced From

25 lots remaining.

Examine the tax structure in Sonoma County, and you'll know why Diamond A Ranch Estates have been selling at such a pace.

A sound buy for a home forever, or high return speculation.

"Good Friday Spell" from "Parsifal" and Strauss' "Don Quixote" (KGO, 12:30 p.m.).

State Sen. Richard Rodda and clergymen discuss "gambling and legislation" on "Capitol and the Clergy" (KRON, 12:30 p.m.).

"The 20th Century" repeats the story of humanitarian Dr. Howard A. Rusk and his Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation (KPIX, 6 p.m.)

Gov. Edmund G. Brown will discuss the rioting in Los Angeles with newsmen Howard K. Smith and Piers Anderton on "Issues and Answers" (KGO, 1:30 p.m.).

Ed Sullivan's repeat bill features Laurence Harvey, Jack Jones, the Rolling Stones, Kim Sisters, London Lee, Stiller and Meara and Peg Leg Bates (KPIX, 8 p.m.).

There's an Elvis Presley movie, "Follow That Dream" (KGO, 9 p.m.).

And, from another era, Freddie Bartholomew pictured in "David Copperfield," with W. C. Fields (KGO, 2:30 p.m.).

"Knights of the Black Cross" is a Polish-made color spectacular based on a novel by Nobel Prize-winner Henryk Sienkiewicz (KTVU, 7 p.m.).

Glenn Yarbrough appears in "Shivaree" with Sonny and Cher and others (KGO, 5 p.m.).

Football immortal Knute Rockne is the subject of "Biography" (KRON, 6 p.m.).

Walt Disney begins a repeat of the three-part comedy-drama "Kilroy" with Warren Berlinger in the title role (KRON, 7 p.m.).

"Lamp Unto My Feet" shows highlights of the dedication of the three-million-dollar Ecumenical Center in Geneva, headquarters of the World Council of Churches (KPIX, 8 a.m.).

SINGER Linda Bennett is one of Al Hirt's guests on his "Fanfare" variety show tonight at 7:30 o'clock on KPIX.

SATURDAY

Who spilled the blackberry brandy on the Barwick carpet?

Here is that tough carpet you have seen demonstrated daily on TV. It was tested before your eyes under the most difficult conditions. Isn't this what you have been looking for at the price of ordinary floor covering?

AS SEEN ON NBC TV TODAY SHOW

EASIEST TO CLEAN; SPOTS WIPE OFF.

SOIL AND STAINS DON'T STICK.

VIRTUALLY STATIC-FREE; WON'T ATTRACT DIRT.

COLORS WON'T FADE LOCKED IN FOR LIFE.

MORE PILE FOR YOUR MONEY.

TAKE TOUGHEST WEAR; LOOK NEW LONGER.

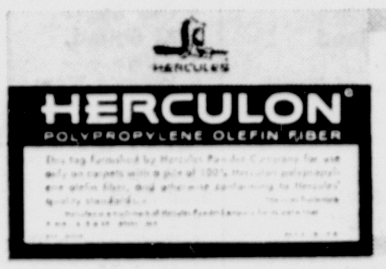

RESIST PILLING, FUZZING, SHEDDING.

MOTH- AND MILDEWPROOF; NONALLERGENIC.

Who cares? It's 100% HERCULON*

It's TRUE! You can be carefree about carpets when the pile is 100% Herculon olefin. Herculon is so easy to clean because it's the least moisture absorbent of all fibers. Spills and stains tend to stay on the surface of the carpet where they can be readily removed with water and detergent or with ordinary household cleaner. Just as important: Herculon stays clean. Its low static electricity does not attract or hold airborne dust or dirt. Come in and see why this new kind of carpeting belongs in your home, today.

$7.95 per square yard

AS SEEN ON LIFE

AREA RUGS

We pride ourselves on our collection of beautiful area rugs in a wonderful array of patterns, colors and textures. You won't believe what they can do to liven a drab room and lift your spirits!

Decorating service is available to you without charge with your furniture purchase. If you wish, our representative will bring carpet samples to your home.
